Car Club

Q. Recently the Woody Woodbury television show had as a guest an Air Force officer with his 1954 Hudson Wasp. He made some mention of a Hudson club, but I failed to get the name and address. I, too, own a 1954 Hudson, and would like to get in touch with this organization. W.C.P., Norwalk.

A. The officer you saw was Maj. Ole Hanson, an active member of the Southern California chapter of the Hudson-Exeter-Terraplane Club. The club started in 1959, two years after the last Hudson was built, and now has 1,800 members throughout the United States. The club holds monthly meetings and sends out a monthly bulletin. For further information you may contact the club president, D. C. Daughterty, 630 Commerce Ave., Hunt Royal, Va., or Maj. Hanson, 4811 Hempstead Ave., Santa Susana, Calif. 93063.

White Crosses

Q. My husband is a World War II veteran and would like to be buried in the Sawtelle cemetery for veterans after he dies. Can he be buried there if he makes this request before he dies? Can his wife be buried with him? Mrs. P.B., Lynwood.

A. Sawtelle is a Veterans Administration cemetery and not a national cemetery. It is reserved only for those veterans who have died in a VA hospital or nursing care unit or who received hospitalization aid from the VA while in a private hospital, according to Jack Martin, chief of medical administration at the VA Regional Office in Los Angeles. At the time of the veteran's death, his widow may make arrangements to be buried in the same grave when she dies provided she does not remarry. Any veteran is qualified for burial in a national cemetery. There are two such cemeteries in California, but they are full. The nearest one accepting burials is in Portland, Ore., Martin says. Arrangements for burial there should be made at the time of death by the mortuary.

Sour Milk

Q. While visiting in Arkansas I discovered Bulgarian buttermilk — whole milk that has been made into buttermilk by use of a culture. I can't seem to find this buttermilk locally. Could ACTION LINE tell me if a local dairy makes this product? J.M.L., Wilmington.

A. Yes. The Alta Dena Dairy Products Company makes what it calls cafir milk, made with a Bulgarian culture. According to Duke Fletcher, route supervisor for the Alta Dena Dairy in Hawthorne, it is a very thick buttermilk — almost a cross between buttermilk and yogurt. You may buy it at the Hawthorne store, 3645 Rosecrans Ave., or place an order for home delivery by calling 772-1131.

Derby Hat

Q. My granddaughter is a member of the Long Beach International Childrens Choir. She represents Bolivia. We are trying to find her a Bolivian derby to complete her costume, but have not been able to. Can you help us? M.E., Long Beach.

A. St. Victor Hugo, Bolivian consul general, says he does not know of any shops in the area where you can buy an authentic Bolivian gray derby. However, if you call on him in his office any Monday, Wednesday or Friday from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at 610 Main St., Los Angeles, he will make arrangements for your granddaughter to get the hat. The chola Indians of Bolivia normally wear the derby over their long, black pigtailed and keep it on even while doing housework, writes Ruth Edward Kilgour in "Pageant of Hats, Ancient and Modern." Indians of another group in the South American republic wear tounguitos, white straw hats with very high crowns. Straw hats worn by some women in Central and South America can be purchased for $8 at the United Nations Association, 1051 Westwood Blvd., Los Angeles 90024.

Prison Without Walls

Q. I would like information about the California Institution for Men at Chino. I understand it is a very liberal prison. How does it work and what is the minimum security? B.S., Claremont.

A. The California Institution for Men is a minimum custody institution, established in 1941. As opposed to a maximum custody institution, there are no walls or armed guards. The men are, however, under constant supervision. Out of 1,320 inmates housed at the institution, not more than one or two a month attempt escape, according to E. J. Oberhauser, superintendent. Correctional treatment at the institution is designed primarily for carefully screened young male offenders whom authorities feel are capable of profiting from the programs and accepting the responsibilities in a minimum custody institution. The educational program stresses vocational training as well as academic programs through the 12th grade. Industrial operations, which are self-supporting, include a furniture factory, laundry, dairy, hog and cattle ranch, slaughterhouse, pastures and acres for vegetable gardening. The operation employs supervisors and foremen who guide the activities of some 425 inmates in various trades and work projects. Guided tours start at 1 p.m. each Wednesday for individuals or small groups of 2 or 3. Larger groups must make arrangements with the superintendent's secretary.

SOUND OFF!

I think that Mrs. P.D., who sounded off about hiring prejudice against Navy wives by Long Beach businessmen, should take a look at the businessman's viewpoint. He spends precious time and money to train her to do a job, only to have her resign because the Navy is transferring her husband. The businessman's investment is a complete loss. Rather than complain, why doesn't she seek a job with the agencies specializing in providing temporary help to business firms? They can give her steady employment and a good salary. I speak from experience, having been in a similar situation. Mrs. J.F.F., Long Beach, and others.

Kirschke Blasts Harris

Charges Case Prejudiced by
'Hoax' Remarks

By GEORGE LAINE

Jack Kirschke and Albert C. S. Ramsey Friday charged that the state's prosecuting attorney has "prejudiced" Kirschke's appeal on two first-degree murder convictions by branding statements of two new witnesses a hoax.

The former deputy district attorney and his lawyer said Assistant Atty. Gen. Albert Harris may have had his investigators exert "improper pressure" and "undue influence" to force the pair to recant earlier statements.

HARRIS FORMALIZED what had been only a rumor late Friday when he announced that two still unidentified men who had claimed to have evidence that would tend to clear Kirschke of the murder of his wife and her boyfriend had admitted they fabricated the story.

"They were not at or about the Kirschke apartment on the night of the killing, they did not see a man and a woman leave the apartment, they did not see a gun, and they did not see the man and the woman leave in a gold Porsche."

(Harris Thursday denied that his office labeled the witnesses' story a hoax.)

"We cannot disclose the identity of these persons at this time. We have disclosed their identity and whereabouts to Mr. Kirschke. These persons have admitted they fabricated this story in order to secure money from Mr. Ramsey or Mr. Kirschke. The wives of each of these persons have confirmed that this was a hoax," Harris said.

HARRIS SAID he planned to release the information in "an orderly manner" but that the press report — the Los Angeles Times claimed Thursday night the two men, part of a five-man gang, had admitted they were lying when they gave their story to Ramsey — forced him to make the position of his office clear.

He said the questioning of the two men — and their wives — was conducted jointly by agents from the attorney general's office and from the office of Orange County District Attorney Cecil Hicks.

Kirschke said he had received the names and whereabouts of the two men late Thursday night — a week after the attorney general's office said it would furnish the data to Kirschke "immediately."

"I DON'T KNOW what kind of improper influences have been brought to bear by the attorney general's office," Kirschke said Friday. He said if the men were — as they have declared — involved in some kind of burglary operation, "there is all the leverage in the world that can be brought to bear."

Ramsey said if Harris' investigators have been going "after them for as long as we suspect they have, it's a wonder they don't say they saw Jack do it."

Ramsey said that under the type of investigation normally performed by the attorney general's office, the pair might be expected to agree to anything.

Harris denied that any "pressures" were used on the two men.

"WE TALKED to them, off and on, for several days," he said. He said the two men were not in custody at any time, that they talked "freely, of their own accord" to the investigators. He ridiculed the

Russian, U.S. Ships Collide

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet merchant ship and a U.S. destroyer collided off Korea Wednesday in an incident the Pentagon apparently sought to minimize because of tension stirred by North Korea's recent seizure of the Navy ship Pueblo.

The Defense Department, disclosing the minor collision Friday, said the 10,000-ton Kapitän Vislobokov and the 3,500-ton USS Rowan collided in the Sea of Japan Thursday.

At the time the vessels were about 95 miles east of Pohang, South Korea, and well south of the North Korean port of Wonsan where the intelligence ship Pueblo is held.

The Pentagon said the Rowan had the right of way but the State Department said the Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow protested to the U.S. embassy, asserting the warship was in the wrong.

NEITHER SHIP reported any casualties, but the destroyer emerged with a three-foot hole above the water line on her port bow.

"When queried by flashing lights, the Vislobokov signaled 'no assistance required' and 'damage to my stern two meters in length,'" the Pentagon reported. Two meters are a little over six feet.

Later, defense officials told newsmen they believe the collision was in no way connected with the Pueblo incident — "unless you take the far-fetched idea that had it not been for the Pueblo, the destroyer wouldn't have been in the area."

Officials refused to say what the destroyer's mission was or that it was one of the U.S. ships recently dispatched in a naval buildup off Korean shores.

The Vislobokov was reported en route from Japan to Vladivostok.

Reagan Plans Budget Hike, Pledges 'No Tax Increase'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Reagan said Friday night he would ask for a 1968-69 state budget 7.1 per cent higher than this fiscal year's budget, but he pledged there would be no increase in taxes.

He said the budget, which is to be submitted to the legislature Monday, would include $200 million for "local tax relief" and $90 million for construction "largely for colleges and universities."

REAGAN disclosed the figures at a California Newspaper Publishers Association banquet at the Century Plaza Hotel.

Also present at the affair were Lt. Gov. Robert H. Finch, State Controller Houston I. Flournoy, Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan, State Treasurer Ivy Baker Priest Stevens and Dr. Max Rafferty, state superintendent of public instruction.

Reagan said had it not been for the economies his administration had achieved he would have had to ask for $130 million in new taxes.

"WE WANT to continue to economize and we'll need the help of the Legislature" in solving welfare and Medi-Cal problems, he said.

After the meeting, newsmen asked Reagan about his speech, and he enumerated what he called the progress his administration has made in the past year since his last talk to the newspapermen.

HE SAID by June 30, 1967, there were 2.3 per cent fewer state employees "than when we started in January."

The figure is now 1.8 per cent, he said.

The governor said his Public Works Department had achieved $22 million in economies by careful purchasing and his Division of Highways would be able to start one year in advance 44 projects totaling $110 million.

He did say that although the United States did not expect the release of the crewmen aboard the intelligence gathering ship soon, U.S. officials had heard from neutral nations on the condition of the crew.

"The men are being treated well, the wounded have received medical treatment, the body of the man who died is being held and that is about the extent of our knowledge," Johnson said.

DR. KING'S CRUSADE

Poor Squatters Plan Shantytown in D.C.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. says he will take his squatter army of the nation's poor to Washington this April and build a settlement of tumbledown shanties among the cherry blossoms to point up the plight of the needy.

The shanties — to "house the troops of hopeless and embittered poor" — are a part of King's strategy for the massive demonstration of militant nonviolence in his Poor People's Campaign.

Don't underestimate love at first sight. You may not pass a second inspection.

Saigon Hit Again by Reds

SAIGON (AP) — Widespread, savage fighting raged into the fifth day in key South Vietnamese cities Saturday.

The U.S. Command reported 12,704 enemy had been killed since Monday evening in allied counterattacks that were said to be crushing the biggest Communist offensive of the war.

Fresh fighting broke out in parts of Saigon, and masses of civilians were reported fleeing a battle in a northern suburb of the capital.

At Hue, the old imperial capital far to the north, South Vietnamese forces reported capturing an airfield inside the city's walled citadel.

The Communists launched heavy ground assaults on at least six provincial capitals and district towns in the rice-growing Mekong Delta below Saigon, and in the provinces just north of the city.

ENEMY GUNNERS hit the U.S. air base at Da Nang with 40 rocket rounds. Damage to the base and its planes was reported light. It was the third attack on the base in the last five days.

The U.S. Command said enemy fighters were killed at a rate of 124 plus per hour during the 102-hour period from 6 p.m. last Monday through Friday midnight, making the total 12,704. Allied forces also reported they detained 3,576 enemy suspects.

A total 983 Allied troops were killed in the 102-hour period, including 318 Americans and 661 South Vietnamese. Allied wounded totaled 3,483, of whom 1,639 were Americans and 1,792 South Vietnamese.

While the Communists held parts of several cities and towns across the country, President Nguyen Van Thieu declared:

"The back of the Viet Cong attack has been broken. We can consider they have been totally defeated."

Thieu and U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker appeared on television Friday to tell the people that the guerrillas and their North Vietnamese allies were

6 Missionaries Slain by Reds

Combined News Services

NEW YORK — Six American missionaries, spreading the word of their faith in the dangerous Vietnam countryside, were reported slain Friday in a Viet Cong onslaught through the highlands village of Ban Me Thuot. A 33-year-old nurse was reported missing and another missionary captured. The wife of one of the slain men was injured. The bodies of five of the slain missionaries — three men and two women — were reported left in the village area by the Viet Cong — with bobby traps attached to them. The sixth, a daughter of one of the victims, died later. They are identified as the Rev. Robert Zieme, 49, of Toledo, Ohio; Miss Ruth M. Willing, 42, of Cleveland, a nurse; the Rev. C. Edward Thompson, 43, and his wife, Ruth, 44, of New Kensington, Pa.; and Leon C. Griswold, 66, of White Plains, N.Y. Mrs. Zieme, who was injured, told the Christian and Missionary Alliance in New York by radio telephone later that Griswold's daughter, Carolyn, 41, also a missionary, had died of injuries. Miss Betty Olsen, the 33-year-old nurse, was thought to have fled into the woods around Ban Me Thuot, according to the Alliance. Hank Blood of the Waycliffe Bible Translators was captured.

GRISWOLD

Cambodia Threatened

PHNOM PENH — Prince Norodom Sihanouk charged Friday that Vietnamese communists were supplying weapons to inhabitants of Cambodian border areas, urging them to break away from Cambodia and form an independent state. He warned that all Communist "traitors" would be shot. The Cambodian chief of state spoke as officials disclosed that the Communist insurgency against Sihanouk's neutral regime, previously limited to the northwest of the country, had spread to the northeastern province of Rattanakiri, bordering on Vietnam.

UN Mission to End

UNITED NATIONS — The United Nations announced Friday that the peace mission of Swedish diplomat Herbert de Ribbing to ease tensions between Cambodia and Thailand would be terminated because of Cambodia's refusal to permit it to continue. A spokesman for Secretary-General U Thant said Thant had notified the two governments Wednesday that the De Ribbing mission would end Feb. 15, 18 months after it began.

More Quakes in Palermo

PALERMO, Sicily — Two small earthquakes trembled across western Sicily Friday, bringing to 86 the number of tremors recorded in the Mediterranean island in the past 20 days. Friday's tremors were comparatively light, although they quickened fear among Sicilians still trying to dig out from earlier quakes. At least 250 persons have been killed in the series of quakes which began Jan. 14.

Plane Misses Houses

TORONTO — A twin-engine plane reported to be a naval sub-chaser crashed between two houses in northern Metropolitan Toronto Friday night. First reports were that four bodies, believed to be from the plane's crew, were picked up at the scene.

No More Aussies to Viet

SYDNEY, Australia — Australia will make no further increase in its military commitment in South Vietnam, Prime Minister John Gorton said Friday. Speaking at a press briefing in Canberra, he said that "as far as I am concerned it's a permanent statement."

Police, Students Battle

Slav Statesman Dies

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — Dr. Ivan Ribar, president of Yugoslavia's war time parliament and of the postwar parliament's presidium, died here Friday after a brief illness. The politician and statesman was 87.

BIRMINGHAM, England — Foreign Secretary George Brown urged Friday night that the Soviet Union join Britain in an immediate appeal for an end to the fighting in Vietnam.

Rule Red Group Gets Equal Time

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission ruled Friday that a radio station that editorially attacked the W.E.B. DuBois clubs as being "controlled by American Communists" must, under the fairness doctrine, give the group radio time to answer. The DuBois clubs have been identified both by the FBI and the Department of Justice as being Communist fronts under the fairness doctrine broadcasters are obligated to present all sides of controversial issues.

The DuBois Clubs case centered around an editorial broadcast over WHN, New York City, which described the organization as Marxist, red, "controlled by American Communists," and "foremost among the activities currently directed against our young people." Storer Broadcasting Co. Inc., owner of the station, said the announcement was factual in nature and was based upon official government source material.

But the FCC, in a four-page letter to Storer, said "the truth or falsity of the attack is not a matter for determination by this commission."

Coal Mine Strike Spreads

PITTSBURGH — A wildcat strike of coal miners, originally a protest against Pennsylvania state police, grew Friday to a massive shutdown that has cut off most of the soft coal production in the country. An industry spokesman said all mines of any size in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee and eastern Kentucky were closed. No official figures were available but apparently as many as 78,000 miners could be idle, and there was no firm indication when they would go back to the pits.

New Diet Pill Ban Looms

WASHINGTON — The government told Congress Friday it was ready to ban the manufacture and sale of diet pills that contain the combination of the drugs thyroid and digitalis which have been widely used for 30 years. Food and Drug Commissioner Goddard said digitalis was an established prescription drug of heart cases and that thyroid was an effective product for glandular disorders. But he said a combination of the two was "irrational as well as dangerous."

Warning on Discrimination

WASHINGTON — The Labor Department is warning firms with federal contracts that they had better eliminate religious discrimination in employment or face the loss of their government business. The warning is in a memorandum from the secretary of Labor to the heads of all federal agencies involved in contracting with industry. The memo warns that "although government contractors have made progress in affording employment opportunities without regard to religion, there remain industries and companies in which some religious groups, notably Jews, and to some extent Catholics, are still excluded from positions at certain levels of responsibility." The American Jewish Committee, which was one of the groups said to have complained, feels that in some cases large defense contractors have been discriminating against Catholics and Jews, especially in executive level jobs.

Rain, Snow Storm Front

SAN FRANCISCO — A mild storm front moved into Northern California Friday, bringing snow to the mountains and a light, but steady rain to the lower elevations. The U.S. Weather Bureau said the storm would become more intense today, particularly in the north.

Charges Huge Auto 'Safety' Profits

WASHINGTON — Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., accused automobile manufacturers Friday of establishing prices which he said will produce a $100 million profit on the installation of shoulder harnesses. Mondale urged that Congress require disclosure of the actual expense involved in installing safety features. Mondale told a Senate government operations subcommittee that shoulder harnesses for drivers were blamed for price increases averaging $25 a car, but actually are so inexpensive they could have been installed at no price increase. Mondale said he determined that the harnesses are sold to domestic automobile makers for $1.25 to $1.50 each. He said a European producer advised him that harnesses, fittings and anchorages for combination lap and shoulder seat belts cost $2.50 apiece. "This industry will be making a profit of about $20 a car, for an overall profit on this one standard alone of more than $100 million," Mondale said.

Later a federal purchasing official said major automobile manufacturers might give up sales to the government rather than detail specific costs of safety equipment in their bids. Heinz A. Aberfeller, commissioner of the Federal Supply Service, said any such development would seriously impair law enforcement, mail deliveries, internal security and U.S. activities overseas.

SON CHILLY

The father of an American Navy deserter arrived in Stockholm Friday "for a long and thorough talk with my son," but the boy gave him a chilly reception at the airport. Charles Lindner and his wife, employees at a Tobyhanna, Pa., Army depot, found their son Michael, 19, waiting but saying little. The youth was one of four U.S. sailors who made a dramatic escape from the American carrier Intrepid in a Japanese port Oct. 23. After going to the Soviet Union to denounce U.S. involvement in Vietnam, they arrived in Stockholm Dec. 29 and received permission to stay. Young Lindner let his mother hold his hand, but hardly spoke to either parent.

DIAL-A-VOTE

Sen. Russell B. Long proposes a dial-a-vote system to speed decision making in the Senate. "I'm just quietly trying to do a little behind the scenes work," the Louisiana Democrat said, "trying to get them to wake up to the fact that the telephone exists." His objective: A system which would permit senators who are away from the floor to vote by telephone on bills and have their votes counted. He suggested the Senate secretary could handle the telephone dialing. Long said in an interview in Washington that the Senate wastes the equivalent of 200 days a year delaying votes to accommodate absent members or waiting for people to show up for roll calls.

'SHOOT TO KILL'

Hillsborough County State Atty. Paul Antinori Jr., Friday advised law enforcement men in Tampa, Fla., to "shoot to kill" and use dogs and shotguns to combat a wave of armed robberies involving assaults. Antinori also said he will ask courts to sentence persons convicted of armed robberies in which victims were assaulted to life imprisonment, the maximum sentence. The state attorney called a news conference to announce what he called a "hard nose policy." It followed by several weeks Miami Police Chief Walter Headley's announcement that his men would use dogs and carry shotguns to combat crime. Said Antinori, "Our office has been aware of several recent armed robberies in Tampa accompanied by violence to victims, including the pistol-whipping of helpless, innocent women." He said the situation calls for "the use of ultimate force" to bring it to a halt.

Diapers for 2+2

Mrs. Virginia Schroer announced Friday with tentative firmness that she doesn't want any more children for a few years. The pert 19-year-old has given birth to two sets of twins in the past 10 months. "We didn't think it was possible," she said, glancing at 9 day-old Amy and Angela asleep in their crib. "We'll wait a few years before we have any more."

Across the living room, her husband, Tom, 20, shared his hamburger with 10-month-old Nick and Nowell. "I've got twin sisters in my family," Tom offered, "but that's all I know of. And there aren't any twins at all in my family," said his wife. "We just can't believe it." The girls were born Jan. 24, exactly 10 months after the boys. "I was a little surprised when we found out it was twins again," Tom admitted.

"A little!" exclaimed Virginia. "He was surprised enough that he forgot to eat dinner that day."

INFANT SUED

A New York City woman asked State Supreme Court Friday to split three ways a $100,000 state lottery prize won by her 14-month-old son. The woman, Mrs. Barbara Mizrahi, and another son, Marco David, 5, filed suit in State Supreme Court against the infant, Frederick Maurice. According to court papers, David Mizrahi, an accountant, bought three lottery tickets each month—one for his wife, and one for each of his two sons. It was his intention, the paper said, that if any ticket was selected, the three would share the prize equally, and Mrs. Mizrahi asked the court to divide the money that way.

Young Frederick won the October prize, and since state regulations require that the money be paid to the person whose name appears on the winning ticket, the check was in his name.

ON WAY TO JAIL

Charles (Batts) Battaglia surrendered to a U.S. marshal in Tucson Friday to begin serving a 10-year sentence for extortion. He was convicted of forcing a bowling alley operator to remove a coin operated pool table and install one from a company with which he was associated. He was also fined $10,000. Battaglia's attorneys have until Feb. 16 to ask for a rehearing of the U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding his conviction.

ROYAL WEDDING

Before European kings and princes, Princess Benedikte of Denmark weds a German prince today in a marriage ceremony that will be as low key as her position allows. Only 200 guests have been invited to the wedding of the princess, 23, who is second in line to the Danish throne, to Prince Richard of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg, 32. King Frederik IX will be giving the last of his three daughters in marriage. Princess Margarethe, 27, heir to the throne, was married last June to a former French diplomat, who is now Prince Henrik of Denmark. The king's youngest daughter, 21-year-old Anne Marie, was married to King Constantine of Greece in Athens in 1964.

Anne-Marie and Constantine, now in exile in Rome since he failed in an attempt to overthrow the Greek military regime, will attend. Other royalty on hand are King Gustav VI. Adolf of Sweden, King Olav V of Norway, Queen Elizabeth, Britain's queen mother; Crown Prince Harald of Norway, Crown Prince Carl Gustav of Sweden, and Crown Princess Beatrix of the Netherlands. The wedding will take place in the family chapel at the royal Fredensborg Castle north of Copenhagen in accordance with the wishes of the shy princess.

Kirschke Rips Into Prosecutor

Times' story of a five-man gang.

"There's the two men," he said. "Then you might count their wives. That still leaves us one short. Maybe the Times knows something we don't know. If they do, I'd sure like to hear it. In fact, I'd like to know where they found out about the hoax aspect. I'm sure—reasonably sure—no one in my office leaked the story."

(Thursday, Harris denied that his office had branded the witnesses' story a hoax.)

The other principal in the investigation — Orange County District Attorney Hicks — was either "out of his office for the afternoon" or in San Francisco for the past two days, and unavailable for comment.

MRS. HICKS SAID her husband flew to San Francisco, where Harris maintains his office Thursday.

Kirschke called Harris' press release prejudicial.

"He has absolutely precluded — made it impossible no matter what happens now — for me to have a fair trial," said the 46-year-old former Naples resident. He accused Harris of "trying the case in the newspaper."

Kirschke said Harris' press blurb was "in violation of the Constitution, improper and highly prejudicial to my rights, and ultimately the federal courts will not allow it to stand."

RAMSEY SAID Harris, in possession of the information on the two witnesses for several weeks, "should have given the information to the defense instead of hiding the two men from Kirschke.

"Under the circumstances," said Ramsey, "where a man's life is at stake, the procedure should have been to notify us of the identity and let us pick it up from there."

Both Kirschke and Ramsey said they couldn't be sure the two men with whom Harris' agents had been talking were the same pair who told Ramsey in September of their presence near the Kirschke home on the night Elaine Terry Kirschke, 43, and Orville William Drankhan, 41, were shot to death.

KIRSCHKE SAID HE wouldn't "assume they were the same men" and Ramsey said he had not been called to identify the pair.

Ramsey also revealed that Kirschke has twice written letters to Harris — Jan. 23 and again Jan. 24 — urging him to refrain from indulging in speculation in the press.

Friday, after Harris delivered his "hoax" statement, Kirschke was transparently angered.

"How can you try these matters in the press," he asked reporters gathered at Los Angeles County Jail, "and then have a fair and impartial trial before the tribunal?"

Harris, who heard about Kirschke's verbal blast by telephone, reacted in kind.

"Jack Kirschke," he said, slowly and deliberately weighing his words, "is the only guy I know who would call a press conference to denounce somebody's press release."

Kirschke Jury Hit By Ramsey

Albert C. S. Ramsey, former attorney for condemned double slayer Jack Kirschke, has issued a new and bitter condemnation of the jury that convicted his client.

Ramsey's denunciations of the panel that ordered the former deputy district attorney to die have been routine since the jury handed down its decisions Dec. 19 and Jan. 10.

BUT Ramsey's latest attack did have one thing that set it apart — it came in an address to 114 California State College at Long Beach City College law students assembled for an end-of-semester dinner at the Golden Sails Inn. The dinner, arranged by students Sue Brunswick, Michael Durand and Barbara Wrighton, proved a bombshell.

Ramsey chronicled a lengthy list of conflicts and inconsistencies within the case itself, lashing Long Beach Police Department investigators, the California attorney general's office, judicial decisions by Superior Court Judge Kathleen Parker and other targets.

BUT THE attorney, a 30-year veteran of courtroom action, saved his most acid comments for the 12 men and women who composed the Kirschke jury.

"It was," he told the students and Dr. Maurice Mason, their professor, "a very, very bad jury."

'SCIENCE FICTION TABULATIONS'

Polls, Odds-Making Roasted by 4 State Public Figures

By JIM MCCAULEY
From Our L. A. Bureau

Public opinion polls and political odds-makers were roasted Friday by four of California's top public figures.

In a panel before a California Newspaper Publishers Association convention, Mayor Samuel W. Yorty of Los Angeles charged that some publishers use "slanted polls" on the upcoming U. S. Senate race.

THE POLLS are being interpreted to convince Californians that incumbent Sen. Thomas Kuchel cannot be successfully challenged, Yorty declared.

"I regard polls as science fiction," chimed in Rafferty, state superintendent of public instruction.

He declared that if polls accurately could forecast elections that Thomas Dewey would be president, Glenn Anderson, lieutenant governor; Alan Cranston, state controller, and Ralph Richardson, state superintendent of public instruction.

GOP ASSEMBLY Minority Leader Robert T. Monagan, R-Tracy, said a danger exists that too many persons will follow the lead of polls rather than their own judgment.

Monagan also expressed fears that pollster questions may not be penetrating enough to obtain meaningful results. He said he doubts if any poll on withholding state income-tax has probed whether public opinion favors withholding if it means paying taxes twice in the same calendar year. The issue of forgiveness for one calendar year or part of a year is a key point of legislative debate, Monagan pointed out.

Ex-Gov. Edmund G. Brown recalled how he financially beat the 5-to-1 betting odds against him when he was elected district attorney in San Francisco.

Brown confided that he took a $100 contribution and bet it on himself. Several of his friends also wagered on the 5-to-1 odds.

"IT WAS the only campaign before or since in which I didn't have a campaign deficit," said Brown.

The ex-governor stated: "All this is illegal... but the statute of limitations is up."

Brown also said polls "almost are too accurate at times." They properly caught the trends in his gubernatorial victories over William Knowland and Richard Nixon.

"They had a very discouraging effect on us in 1966. We slipped behind in March. By October we

'Only Hope for Urban U.S.' Reagan Denies Friction

By DAVID SHAW

Only a massive and immediate effort by private industry can alleviate oppressive conditions in urban ghettos before the residents of those ghettos destroy urban America.

That was the conclusion Friday of five prominent 1967 college graduates serving nine-month internships in public affairs for the nonprofit, privately financed Coro Foundation of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

THE INTERNS — midway through their training for leadership in business, labor and government — termed today's urban crisis "a greater threat to national security and collective existence than the Civil War or Hitler's Germany."

Among their recommendations for nongovernmental responses to this threat were:

—Less restrictive regulations by financial institutions in lending money for building and rehabilitating low-cost housing.

—Rent supplements for low-cost housings.

—Hiring unemployed Negroes to work on housing construction in their own communities.

—Business-managed and subsidized job-training programs that, interwoven with academic instruction, would have the effect of paying potential dropouts to remain in school and simultaneously develop usable job skills.

—Recruit minority group employees by setting up tables and conducting interviews in the ghetto — on street corners and in service stations, if necessary — rather than through newspaper classified ads most of them never see and in State Department of Employment interviews that confuse and frighten many of them.

The interns making these recommendations — Jane Blake of UCLA, Robin Flint of Middlebury College, John Greenwood of the University of California at Riverside, Erich Larisch of the University of Washington and Eugene Siskel of Yale — warned that it is "futile" to postpone these programs by citing the progress Negroes have made in the past 30 years.

"As long as the infant mortality rate remains 30 times greater among Negroes than whites, and as long as we spend more on the war in Vietnam in one month than we spend in the war on poverty in one year, we cannot be content," Siskel said.

"Our cities are burning, and more of us better start smelling the smoke."

THE CORO team made its recommendations to an audience of 60 persons, including representatives of city, state and national government and business, labor and human relations experts.

A second Coro team — Richard Beserra of the University of California at Berkeley, Steven Burnett of Iowa State, Stephen Frantz of Harvard, Barbara Shaw of Stanford and Quentin Spector of Harvard — made a report to the audience on causes of and solutions to the rising crime rate.

Both Spector and Miss Shaw hammered away at the "falacious reasoning" that — in Spector's words — "putting more muscle in the arm of the law" is the best deterrent to crime.

He called this "buck-passing," and lamented America's "undue reliance on the effectiveness of legalistic deterrents to crime."

"THE PUBLIC must protect itself by avoiding carelessness and neglect in the protection of itself and its belongings," he said, citing Los Angeles Police Department statistics showing 25,000 stolen cars last year — 20,000 of them left unlocked and 15,000 with the keys left inside.

Perhaps, Spector suggested, insurance policies could be "tailored so that the company's liability and the victim's claim would be in direct proportion to his carelessness at self-protection."

Miss Shaw, who investigated penal procedures and correctional institutions, blamed inadequate job-training programs in these institutions for the high rate of repeat-offenders. Most vocational education programs in prisons are "geared more to reducing the expense of prison operations than to training the inmates to lead productive lives after their release."

"Inadequate training at menial tasks is not an attractive alternative to crime," she said.

This lack of training, combined with delays in court procedure that often deprive suspects of freedom and rehabilitation, leads many convicts to return to society "more bitter and antisocial than when they went in," the second Coro team concluded.

Reagan

Friction

Gov. Edmund G. Brown had a 100 per cent turnover in his appointees during his first year of office, Gov. Ronald Reagan said Friday in reply to critics who pointed to resignation of Finance Chief Gordon P. Smith as evidence of "controversy" in his regime.

"Past governors have had their troubles in losing good men too," Reagan said in a planed news conference shortly after arriving at Los Angeles International Airport.

The governor was in Los Angeles for his annual State of California Address, delivered to the California Newspaper Publishers Association convention at the Century Plaza hotel.

About 50 striking employees of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner picketed the hotel.

Minuteman Fails Launch Effort

VANDENBERG AFB (UPI) — A Minuteman II intercontinental ballistic missile failed Friday shortly after it was launched from its silo toward a pre-selected target 5,000 miles across the Pacific Ocean.

Cause of the failure was not determined, the Air Force said.

The launch at 2:17 a.m. PST was conducted by Strategic Air Command missile combat crews from the 394th Strategic Missile Squadron here.

being beaten with unprecipitated losses.

A BATTALION of South Vietnamese Rangers was reported moved into Saigon to reinforce security units.

The U.S. Command reported heavy contact with the Viet Cong about day-break Saturday in the Gia Dinh area on the northern edge of Saigon. It said the enemy was blocked by a South Vietnamese force on the northeast and a U.S. force on the southwest.

The Viet Cong were said to be trying to escape past the South Vietnamese troops, some of them in small boats on the Saigon River.

In the Chinese Cholon section of the capital, fighting broke out in front of a children's hospital. Cholon was hit by six Viet Cong mortar shells during the night.

At Hue, a main gate of the Citadel was reported wrested from Communist control. The U.S. Command said the enemy withdrew into the northern part of the old walled areas under repeated strafing and rocket raids by allied fighters.

Among the targets of the allied planes were anti-aircraft guns the Communists had mounted on the towers of the Citadel's outer wall.

Earlier, the U.S. Command had reported that the enemy was holding on to two corners of the Citadel.

The allies reported killing more than 300 of the enemy in bitter fighting at Hue Friday.

ONE ILLUSTRATION of the tremendous property damage the Communist offensive has caused was a report from President Johnson on the toll of aircraft at American fields across Vietnam. He said 15 planes and 23 helicopters were destroyed, and about 100 other planes so severely damaged they would have to be replaced.

At the resort city of Dalat, 140 miles northeast of Saigon, enemy machine-gun fire hit U.S. installations, the railroad station and a South Vietnamese army post.

At Xuan Loc, a provincial capital 38 miles east of Saigon, Communist troops swarmed in from two sides and hit at every allied compound in the city. American planes strafed the attackers.

More than 500 enemy raiders attacked allied positions in Ben Tre city, a provincial capital in the Mekong Delta. U.S. headquarters said the attack was repulsed after 5½ hours.

IN CAN THO, another provincial capital and the largest city in the delta south of Saigon, mortar rounds set several fires in the U.S. Special Forces compound near the airfield. Communist forces also stormed into Mo Cay, a district town in the delta.

Big Saturn En Route to Florida

An eight-story Saturn second-stage rocket segment destined to loft a manned Apollo mission next year began its long journey into orbit from Seal Beach Friday.

The S-II stage, fifth flight model delivered by North American Rockwell's Space Division, was loaded aboard the USNS Pt. Barrow for a 15-day trip through the Panama Canal to National Aeronautics and Space Administration test facilities near New Orleans.

After static test firing of its five J-2 rocket engines, the booster will be transported to Kennedy Space Center to be mated with other segments of the 365-foot high Saturn V-Apollo for one of the final manned lunar mission orbital tests in 1969.

6 Missionaries Slain by Reds

NEW YORK — Six American missionaries, spreading the word of their faith in the dangerous Vietnam countryside, were reported slain Friday in a Viet Cong onslaught through the highlands village of Ban Me Thuot. A 33-year-old nurse was reported missing and another missionary captured. The wife of one of the slain men was injured. The bodies of five of the slain missionaries — three men and two women — were reported left in the village area by the Viet Cong — with body traps attached to them. The sixth, a daughter of one of the victims, died later. They are identified as the Rev. Robert Ziemer, 49, of Toledo, Ohio; Miss Ruth M. Witting, 42, of Cleveland, a nurse; the Rev. C. Edward Thompson, 43, and his wife, Ruth, 44, of New Kensington, Pa.; and Leon C. Griswold, 66, of White Plains, N.Y. Mrs. Ziemer, who was injured, told the Christian and Missionary Alliance in New York by radio telephone later that Griswold's daughter, Carolyn, 41, also a missionary, had died of injuries. Miss Betty Olsen, the 33-year-old nurse, was thought to have fled into the woods around Ban Me Thuot, according to the Alliance. Hank Blood of the Waycliffe Bible Translators was captured.

GRISWOLD

Cambodia Threatened
PHNOM PENH — Prince Norodom Sihanouk charged Friday that Vietnamese communists were supplying weapons to inhabitants of Cambodian border areas, urging them to break away from Cambodia and form an independent state. He warned that all Communist "traitors" would be shot. The Cambodian chief of state spoke as officials disclosed that the Communist insurgency against Sihanouk's neutral regime, previously limited to the northwest of the country, had spread to the northeastern province of Rattanakiri, bordering on Vietnam.

UN Mission to End
UNITED NATIONS — The United Nations announced Friday that the peace mission of Swedish diplomat Herbert R. Ribbing to ease tensions between Cambodia and Thailand would be terminated because of Cambodia's refusal to permit it to continue. A spokesman for Secretary-General U Thant said Thant had notified the two governments Wednesday that the De Ribbing mission would end Feb. 15, 18 months after it began.

More Quakes in Palermo
PALERMO, Sicily — Two small earthquakes trembled across western Sicily Friday, bringing to 86 the number of tremors recorded in the Mediterranean island in the past 20 days. Friday's tremors were comparatively light, although they quickened fear among Sicilians still trying to dig out from earlier quakes. At least 250 persons have been killed in the series of quakes which began Jan. 14.

Plane Misses Houses
TORONTO — A twin-engine plane reported to be a naval sub-chaser crashed between two houses in northern Metropolitan Toronto Friday night. First reports were that four bodies, believed to be from the plane's crew, were picked up at the scene.

No More Aussies to Viet
SYDNEY, Australia — Australia will make no further increase in its military commitment in South Vietnam, Prime Minister John Gorton said Friday. Speaking at a press briefing in Canberra, he said that "as far as I am concerned it's a permanent statement."

Police, Students Battle

Slav Statesman Dies
ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — Dr. Ivan Ribar, president of Yugoslavia's war time parliament and of the postwar parliament's presidium, died here Friday after a brief illness. The politician and statesman was 87.

Russ Get British Appeal
BIRMINGHAM, England — Foreign Secretary George Brown urged Friday night that the Soviet Union join Britain in an immediate appeal for an end to the fighting in Vietnam.

Rule Red Group Gets Equal Time

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission ruled Friday that a radio station that editorially attacked the W.E.B. DuBois clubs as being "controlled by American Communists" must, under the fairness doctrine, give the group radio time to answer. The DuBois clubs have been identified both by the FBI and the Department of Justice as being Communist fronts under the fairness doctrine broadcasters are obligated to present all sides of controversial issues.

The DuBois Clubs case centered around an editorial broadcast over WHN, New York City, which described the organization as Marxist, red, "controlled by American Communists," and "foremost among the activities currently directed against our young people." Storer Broadcasting Co Inc., owner of the station, said the announcement was factual in nature and was based upon official government source material.

Coal Mine Strike Spreads
PITTSBURGH — A wildcat strike of coal miners, originally a protest against Pennsylvania state police, grew Friday to a massive shutdown that has cut off most of the soft coal production in the country. An industry spokesman said all mines of any size in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee and eastern Kentucky were closed. No official figures were available but apparently as many as 78,000 miners could be idle, and there was no firm indication when they would go back to the pits.

New Diet Pill Ban Looms
WASHINGTON — The government told Congress Friday it was ready to ban the manufacture and sale of diet pills that contain the combination of the drugs thyroid and digitalis which have been widely used for 30 years. Food and Drug Commissioner Goddard said digitalis was an established prescription drug of heart cases and that thyroid was an effective product for glandular disorders. But he said a combination of the two was "irrational as well as dangerous."

Warning on Discrimination
WASHINGTON — The Labor Department is warning firms with federal contracts that they had better eliminate religious discrimination in employment or face the loss of their government business. The warning is in a memorandum from the secretary of Labor to the heads of all federal agencies involved in contracting with industry. The memo warns that "although government contractors have made progress in affording employment opportunities without regard to religion, there remain industries and companies in which some religious groups, notably Jews, and to some extent Catholics, are still excluded from positions at certain levels of responsibility." The American Jewish Committee, which was one of the groups said to have complained, feels that in some cases large defense contractors have been discriminating against Catholics and Jews, especially in executive level jobs.

Rain, Snow Storm Front
SAN FRANCISCO — A mild storm front moved into Northern California Friday, bringing snow to the mountains and a light, but steady rain to the lower elevations. The U.S. Weather Bureau said the storm would become more intense today, particularly in the north.

Charges Huge Auto 'Safety' Profits

WASHINGTON — Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., accused automobile manufacturers Friday of establishing prices which he said will produce a $100 million profit on the installation of shoulder harnesses. Mondale urged that Congress require disclosure of the actual expense involved in installing safety features. Mondale told a Senate government operations subcommittee that shoulder harnesses for drivers were blamed for price increases averaging $25 a car, but actually are so inexpensive they could have been installed at no price increase. Mondale said he determined that the harnesses are sold to domestic automobile makers for $1.25 to $1.50 each. He said a European producer advised him that harnesses, fittings and anchorages for combination lap and shoulder seat belts cost $2.50 apiece. "This industry will be making a profit of about $20 a car, for an overall profit on this one standard alone of more than $100 million," Mondale said. Later a federal purchasing official said major automobile manufacturers might give up sales to the government rather than detail specific costs of safety equipment in their bids. Heinz A. Abelfeller, commissioner of the Federal Supply Service, said any such development would seriously impair law enforcement, mail deliveries, internal security and U.S. activities overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Schroer of Waseca, Minn., were just getting used to their 10-month-old twin sons, Nick (left) and Nowell, when along came Amy (left) and Angela Jan. 24. So far, Mrs. Schroer has to rely on the hospital identification bracelets to tell the girls apart.

SON CHILLY NOT SO WELL

The father of an American Navy deserter arrived in Stockholm Friday "for a long and thorough talk with my son," but the boy gave him a chilly reception at the airport. Charles Lindner and his wife, employees at a Tobyhanna, Pa., Army depot, found their son Michael, 19, waiting but saying little. The youth was one of four U.S. sailors who made a dramatic escape from the American carrier Intrepid in a Japanese port Oct. 23. After going to the Soviet Union to denounce U.S. involvement in Vietnam, they arrived in Stockholm Dec. 29 and received permission to stay. Young Lindner let his mother hold his hand, but hardly spoke to either parent.

DIAL-A-VOTE

Sen. Russell B. Long proposes a dial-a-vote system to speed decision making in the Senate. "I'm just quietly trying to do a little behind the scenes work," the Louisiana Democrat said, "trying to get them to wake up to the fact that the telephone exists." His objective: A system which would permit senators who are away from the floor to vote by telephone on bills and have their votes counted. He suggested the Senate secretary could handle the telephone balloting. Long said in an interview in Washington that the Senate wastes the equivalent of 200 days a year delaying votes to accommodate absent members or waiting for people to show up for roll calls.

'SHOOT TO KILL'

Hillsborough County State Atty. Paul Antinori Jr., Friday advised law enforcement men in Tampa, Fla., to "shoot to kill" and use dogs and shotguns to combat a wave of armed robberies involving assaults. Antinori also said he will ask courts to sentence persons convicted of armed robberies in which victims were assaulted to life imprisonment, the maximum sentence. The state attorney called a news conference to announce what he called a "hard nose policy." It followed by several weeks Miami Police Chief Walter Headley's announcement that his men would use dogs and carry shotguns to combat crime. Said Antinori, "Our office has been aware of several recent armed robberies in Tampa accompanied by violence to victims, including the pistol-whipping of helpless, innocent women." He said the situation calls for "the use of ultimate force" to bring it to a halt.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Diapers for 2+2

Mrs. Virginia Schroer announced Friday with tentative firmness that she doesn't want any more children for a few years. The pert 19-year-old has given birth to two sets of twins in the past 10 months. "We didn't think it was possible," she said, glancing at 9 day-old Amy and Angela asleep in their crib. "We'll wait a few years before we have any more."

Across the living room, her husband, Tom, 20, shared his hamburger with 10-month-old Nick and Nowell. "I've got twin sisters in my family," Tom offered, "but that's all I know of. "And there aren't any twins at all in my family," said his wife. "We just can't believe it." The girls were born Jan. 24, exactly 10 months after the boys. "I was a little surprised when we found out it was twins again," Tom admitted.

INFANT SUED

A New York City woman asked State Supreme Court Friday to split three ways a $100,000 state lottery prize won by her 14-month-old son. The woman, Mrs. Barbara Mizrahi, and another son, Marco David, 5, filed suit in State Supreme Court against the infant, Frederick Maurice. According to court papers, David Mizrahi, an accountant, bought three lottery tickets each month—one for his wife, and one for each of his two sons. It was his intention, the paper said, that if any ticket was selected, the three would share the prize equally, and Mrs. Mizrahi asked the court to divide the money that way. Young Frederick won the October prize, and since state regulations require that the money be paid to the person whose name appears on the winning ticket, the check was in his name.

ON WAY TO JAIL

Charles (Batts) Battaglia surrendered to a U.S. marshal in Tucson Friday to begin serving a 10-year sentence for extortion. He was convicted of forcing a bowling alley operator to remove a coin operated pool table and install one from a company with which he was associated. He was also fined $10,000. Battaglia's attorneys have until Feb. 16 to ask for a rehearing of the U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding his conviction.

LBJ PARTY

President and Mrs. Johnson have sent out invitations to a mammoth reception for all members of Congress and wives on Feb. 20, the White House said. The lawmakers will be given a 7 p.m. black tie reception by the Johnsons.

ROYAL WEDDING

Before European kings and princes, Princess Benedikte of Denmark weds a German prince today in a marriage ceremony that will be as low key as her position allows. Only 200 guests have been invited to the wedding of the princess, 23, who is second in line to the Danish throne, to Prince Richard of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg, 32. King Frederik IX will be giving the last of his three daughters in marriage. Princess Margarethe, 27, heir to the throne, was married last June to a former French diplomat, who is now Prince Henrik of Denmark. The king's youngest daughter, 21-year-old Anne Marie, was married to King Constantine of Greece in Athens in 1964.

Anne-Marie and Constantine, now in exile in Rome since he failed in an attempt to overthrow the Greek military regime, will attend. Other royalty on hand are King Gustav VI, Adolf of Sweden, King Olav V of Norway; Queen Elizabeth, Britain's queen mother; Crown Prince Harald of Norway; Crown Prince Carl Gustav of Sweden, and Crown Princess Beatrix of the Netherlands. The wedding will take place in the family chapel at the royal Fredensborg Castle north of Copenhagen in accordance with the wishes of the shy princess.

Times' story of a five-man gang.

"There's the two men," he said. "Then you might count their wives. That still leaves us one short. Maybe the Times knows something we don't know. If they do, I'd sure like to hear it. In fact, I'd like to know where they found out about the hoax aspect. I'm sure—reasonably sure—no one in my office leaked the story."

(Thursday, Harris denied that his office had branded the witnesses' story a hoax.)

The other principal in the investigation — Orange County District Attorney Hicks — was either "out of his office for the afternoon" or in San Francisco for the past two days, and unavailable for comment.

MRS. HICKS SAID her husband flew to San Francisco, where Harris maintains his office Thursday.

Kirschke called Harris' press release prejudicial.

"He has absolutely precluded—made it impossible no matter what happens now—for me to have a fair trial," said the 46-year-old former Naples resident. He accused Harris of "trying the case in the newspaper." Kirschke said Harris' press blurb was "in violation of the Constitution, improper and highly prejudicial to my rights, and ultimately the federal courts will not allow it to stand."

RAMSEY SAID Harris, in possession of the information on the two witnesses for several weeks, "should have given the information to the defense instead of hiding the two men from Kirschke.

"Under the circumstances," said Ramsey, "where a man's life is at stake, the procedure should have been to notify us of the identity and let us pick it up from there."

Both Kirschke and Ramsey said they couldn't be sure the two men with whom Harris' agents had been talking were the same pair who told Ramsey in September of their presence near the Kirschke home on the night Elaine Terry Kirschke, 43, and Orville William Drankhan, 41, were shot to death.

KIRSCHKE SAID HE wouldn't "assume they were the same men" and Ramsey said he had not been called to identify the pair.

Ramsey also revealed that Kirschke has twice written letters to Harris—Jan. 23 and again Jan. 24—urging him to refrain from indulging in speculation in the press.

Friday, after Harris delivered his "hoax" statement, Kirschke was transparently angered.

"How can you try these matters in the press," he asked reporters gathered at Los Angeles County Jail, "and then have a fair and impartial trial before the tribunal?"

Harris, who heard about Kirschke's verbal blast by telephone, reacted in kind.

Kirschke Jury Hit By Ramsey

Albert C. S. Ramsey, former attorney for condemned double slayer Jack Kirschke, has issued a new and bitter condemnation of the jury that convicted his client.

Ramsey's denunciations of the panel that ordered the former deputy district attorney to die have been routine since the jury handed down its decisions Dec. 19 and Jan. 10.

BUT Ramsey's latest attack did have one thing that set it apart — it came in an address to 114 California State College at Long Beach City College law students assembled for an end-of-semester dinner at the Golden Sails Inn. The dinner, arranged by students Sue Brunswick, Michael Durand and Barbara Wright, proved a bombshell.

Ramsey chronicled a lengthy list of conflicts and inconsistencies within the case itself, lashing Long Beach Police Department investigators, the California attorney general's office, judicial decisions by Superior Court Judge Kathleen Parker and other targets.

BUT THE attorney, a 30-year veteran of courtroom action, saved his most acid comments for the 12 men and women who composed the Kirschke jury.

"It was," he told the students and Dr. Maurice Mason, their professor, "a very, very bad jury." During the course of the 90 minute talk, Ramsey called the jury "dull," "misfits," "legally incompetent" and other derogatory epithets.

'SCIENCE FICTION TABULATIONS'

By JIM McCAULEY
From Our L. A. Bureau

Public opinion polls and political odds-makers were roasted Friday by four of California's top public figures.

In a panel before a California Newspaper Publishers Association convention, Mayor Samuel W. Yorty of Los Angeles charged that some publishers use "slanted polls" on the upcoming U. S. Senate race.

THE POLLS are being interpreted to convince Californians that incumbent Sen. Thomas Kuchel cannot be successfully challenged, Yorty declared.

"I regard polls as science fiction," chimed in Rafferty, state superintendent of public instruction.

He declared that if polls accurately could forecast elections that Thomas Dewey would be president, Glenn Anderson, lieutenant governor; Alan Cranston, state controller; and Ralph Richardson, state superintendent of public instruction.

At one point, Monagan unleashed a tongue-in-cheek barb at the Johnson Administration's foreign policy by telling panelists:

"I hope you have all heard the good news how the President has arranged for an exchange that will return the Pueblo. We're going to give them the Enterprise."

Commented Ridder: "I was afraid you were going to say the Queen Mary."

learned we were losing more ground," Brown said.

He suggested that maybe polls should not be published in the final two weeks of a campaign.

THE FOUR public figures exchanged views on conflict of interest, the Far East situation, university tuition and other issues with four publishing executives.

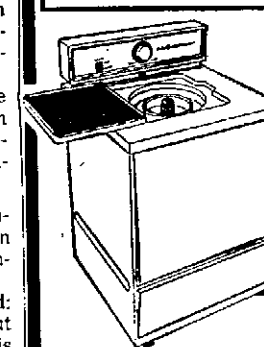

Newspaper participants included Daniel H. Ridder, co-publisher, Independent Press-Telegram; Robert N. Weed, publisher, Orange Coast Daily Pilot; J. Hart Clinton, publisher, San Mateo Times; and Ferdinand Mendenhall, editor, Van Nuys News.

being beaten with unprecipitated losses.

A BATTALION of South Vietnamese Rangers was reported moved into Saigon to reinforce security units.

The U. S. Command reported heavy contact with the Viet Cong about daybreak Saturday in the Gia Dinh area on the northern edge of Saigon. It said the enemy was blocked by a South Vietnamese force on the northeast and a U. S. force on the southwest.

The Viet Cong were said to be trying to escape past the South Vietnamese troops, some of them in small boats on the Saigon River.

In the Chinese Cholon section of the capital, fighting broke out in front of a children's hospital. Cholon was hit by six Viet Cong mortar shells during the night.

At Hue, a main gate of the Citadel was reported wrested from Communist control. The U. S. Command said the enemy withdrew into the northern part of the old walled areas under repeated strafing and rocket raids by allied fighter-bombers.

Among the targets of the allied planes were anti-aircraft guns the Communists had mounted on the towers of the Citadel's outer wall.

Earlier, the U. S. Command had reported that the enemy was holding on to two corners of the Citadel.

The allies reported killing more than 300 of the enemy in bitter fighting at Hue Friday.

ONE ILLUSTRATION of the tremendous property damage the Communist offensive has caused was a report from President Johnson on the toll of aircraft at American fields across Vietnam. He said 15 planes and 23 helicopters were destroyed, and about 100 other planes so severely damaged they would have to be replaced.

At the resort city of Da Lat, 140 miles northeast of Saigon, enemy machine-gun fire hit U. S. installations, the railroad station and a South Vietnamese army post.

At Xuan Loc, a provincial capital 38 miles east of Saigon, Communist troops swarmed in from two sides and hit at every allied compound in the city. American planes strafed the attackers.

More than 500 enemy raiders attacked allied positions in Ben Tre city, a provincial capital in the Mekong Delta. U. S. headquarters said the attack was repulsed after 5 1/2 hours.

IN CAN THO, another provincial capital and the largest city in the delta south of Saigon, mortar rounds set several fires in the U. S. Special Forces compound near the airfield. Communist forces also stormed into Mo Cay, a district town in the delta.

Industry Initiative in Ghettos

'Only Hope for Urban U.S.' Reagan Denies Friction

By DAVID SHAW

Only a massive and immediate effort by private industry can alleviate, oppressive conditions in urban ghettos before the residents of those ghettos destroy urban America.

That was the conclusion Friday of five prominent 1967 college graduates serving nine-month internships in public affairs for the nonprofit, privately financed Coro Foundation of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

THE INTERNS — midway through their training for leadership in business, labor and government — termed today's urban crisis "a greater threat to national security and collective existence than the Civil War or Hitler's Germany."

Among their recommendations for nongovernmental responses to this threat were:

- Less restrictive regulations by financial institutions in lending money for building and rehabilitating low-cost housing.
- Rent supplements for low-cost housings.
- Hiring unemployed Negroes to work on housing construction in their own communities.

Big Saturn En Route to Florida

An eight-story Saturn second-stage rocket segment destined to loft a manned Apollo mission next year began its long journey into orbit from Seal Beach Friday.

The S-II stage, fifth flight model delivered by North American Rockwell's Space Division, was loaded aboard the USNS Pt. Barrow for a 15-day trip through the Panama Canal to National Aeronautics and Space Administration test facilities near New Orleans.

After static test firing of its five J-2 rocket engines, the booster will be transported to Kennedy Space Center to be mated with other segments of the 365-foot high Saturn V-Apollo for one of the final manned lunar mission orbital tests in 1969.

ing construction in their own communities.

—Business-managed and subsidized job-training programs that, interwoven with academic instruction, would have the effect of paying potential dropouts to remain in school and simultaneously develop usable job skills.

—Recruit minority group employees by setting up tables and conducting interviews in the ghetto — on street corners and in service stations, if necessary — rather than through newspaper classified ads most of them never see and in State Department of Employment interviews that confuse and frighten many of them.

The interns making these recommendations — Jane Blake of UCLA, Robin Flint of Middlebury College, John Greenwood of the University of California at Riverside, Erich Larisch of the University of Washington and Eugene Siskel of Yale — warned that it is "futile" to postpone these programs by citing the progress Negroes have made in the past 30 years.

"As long as the infant mortality rate remains 30 times greater among Negroes than whites, and as long as we spend more on the war in Vietnam in one month than we spend in the war on poverty in one year, we cannot be content," Siskel said.

"Our cities are burning, and more of us better start smelling the smoke."

THE CORO team made its recommendations to an audience of 60 persons, including representatives of city, state and national government and business, labor and human relations experts.

A second Coro team — Richard Beserra of the University of California at Berkeley, Steven Burnett of Iowa State, Stephen Frantz of Harvard, Barbara Shaw of Stanford and Quentin Spector of Harvard — made a report to the audience on causes of and solutions to the rising crime rate.

Both Spector and Miss Shaw hammered away at the "falacious reasoning" that — in Spector's words — "putting more muscle in the arm of the law" is the best deterrent to crime.

He called this "buck-passing," and lamented America's "undue reliance on the effectiveness of legalistic deterrents to crime."

"THE PUBLIC must protect itself by avoiding carelessness and neglect in the protection of itself and its belongings," he said, citing Los Angeles Police Department statistics showing 25,000 stolen cars last year — 20,000 of them left unlocked and 15,000 with the keys left inside.

Perhaps, Spector suggested, insurance policies could be "tailored so that the company's liability and the victim's claim would be in direct proportion to his carelessness at self-protection."

Miss Shaw, who investigated penal procedures and correctional institutions, blamed inadequate job-training programs in these institutions for the high rate of repeat-offenders. Most vocational education programs in prisons are "geared more to reducing the expense of prison operations than to training the inmates to lead productive lives after their release."

"Inadequate training at menial tasks is not an attractive alternative to crime," she said.

This lack of training, combined with delays in court procedure that often deprive suspects of freedom and rehabilitation, leads many convicts to return to society "more bitter and antisocial than when they went in," the second Coro team concluded.

Reagan Denies Friction

Gov. Edmund G. Brown had a 100 per cent turnover in his appointees during his first year of office, Gov. Ronald Reagan said Friday in reply to critics who pointed to resignation of Finance Chief Gordon P. Smith as evidence of "controversy" in his regime.

"Past governors have had their troubles in losing good men too," Reagan said in a plane-side news conference shortly after arriving at Los Angeles International Airport.

The governor was in Los Angeles for his annual State of California Address, delivered to the California Newspapers Publishers Association convention at the Century Plaza hotel.

About 50 striking employees of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner picketed the hotel.

Minuteman Fails Launch Effort

VANDENBERG AFB (UPI) — A Minuteman II intercontinental ballistic missile failed Friday shortly after it was launched from its silo toward a pre-selected target 5,000 miles across the Pacific Ocean.

Cause of the failure was not determined, the Air Force said.

The launch at 2:17 a.m. PST was conducted by Strategic Air Command missile combat crews from the 394th Strategic Missile Squadron here.

DOESN'T FILE FOR JUNE PRIMARY

Shirley Temple Says 'No'

WOODSIDE (UPI) — Shirley Temple Black Friday decided against an attempt for Congress in the June primary election. The former child movie star lost in her first political bid for office in a special 11th Congressional District election last fall to succeed the late Republican J. Arthur Younger.

Attorney Paul McCloskey, a Korean war hero, captured the Republican nomination by an 20,000-vote margin over Shirley and went on to defeat Democrat Roy M. Archibald in a runoff election.

"We should continue his (McCloskey's) trial for one full term . . ." said Shirley, now 39 and married to wealthy businessman Charles A. Black.

Since her loss to McCloskey last November, Shirley has worked actively with the Republican National Committee in a series of national speaking engagements. Last week, she joined New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon in an appearance before the National Republican Women's Club in New York City.

Plastic Pipe Eyed for Water

Rep. Edward Reinecke, R-Los Angeles, said he has obtained a promise from the Bureau of Reclamation that by December 1970 it would submit results of a reconnaissance study to determine the feasibility of constructing an undersea plastic pipeline to bring fresh water from Northern California rivers to Southern California.

The congressman made the announcement Friday at the University of Southern California.

Reinecke said there was another plan of the bureau "which I can't buy."

"The plan was to install a desalinization plant on the Marine Corps Base at Camp Pendleton, then build an aqueduct to pump fresh water into Lake Mead to reduce the salinity of the Colorado River," the congressman said.

L.A. 'Tax Break' Fantastic Deal

From Our L.A. Bureau

Los Angeles city taxpayers have been paying only one-fourteenth the regular county rate for county assessment and tax-collection service — while taxpayers in other cities have been paying the county their full share.

The cut-rate county deal for Los Angeles, covering almost a half-century, was made public Friday in a letter to County Supervisors. Linton S. Hollinger, chief administrative officer, following up on a board order to review existing assessment-collection fees, recommended that the Los Angeles fees be upgraded to the same maximum rate paid by every other municipality that contracts for county assessment-collection services.

(Long Beach provides its own assessment and municipal tax-collection services).

THE PRESENT special price break for Los Angeles dates back to 1920 when the rate was set at a flat fee of $22,500 a year. For some reason, it hasn't changed in 48 years — in spite of skyrocketing costs and the population explosion.

Los Angeles should be handing over $331,000 a year under the legal maximum rate the county charges — based on a percentage of the take.

Hollinger recommended that County Supervisors order Los Angeles to pay $25,000 on the first 1 per cent collected on taxes, plus 25 per cent on the balance — for an estimated 1967-68 charge of $331,000.

There was no further proposal to charge Los Angeles taxpayers for the difference between their cut-rate fee and the going rate — a multimillion-dollar figure in the past half century.

Arraigned in Slaying

Handyman Horace Odell Bell was arraigned in Los Angeles Superior Court Friday for the grisly murder of a 6-year-old Bell Gardens boy who lived next door to him.

The 48-year-old defendant, formerly of 5954 Ludell St., was arrested in January in Wichita Falls, Tex., for violation of probation.

He had been arrested in 1965 on suspicion of child molesting, but pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of committing an act against public peace, health and decency and was placed on three years' probation.

Bell is accused of killing little Edward E. Gleason, of 5958½ Ludell St., whose body was found July 13 crumpled into an electrical meter box near the Firestone Boulevard overcrossing of the Long Beach Freeway.

The decomposed body was clad only in undershorts.

Bell, who will return to Superior Court Feb. 8 to enter his plea on the murder charge, became a prime suspect on the basis of suspicious remarks he made about the handsome little boy, according to Lt. Norm Hamilton of the sheriff's homicide detail.

There was also physical evidence Hamilton would not reveal.

Bell told investigators he took a bicycle trip to Texas where he has relatives, after the June 20 disappearance of the Gleason boy. Bell waived extradition so he could be returned to face charges.

Chancellor Dumke Warns Against Campus Violence, Supports Dissent

MONTEREY (UPI) — The chancellor of California's state colleges said Friday campus violence is unwarranted "in a nation which has such carefully structured constitutional safeguards for liberty."

Glenn S. Dumke discussed student dissent at the final session of the three-day far west meeting of the American College Public Relations Association.

"Dissent in itself is not new," he said, "but the form it is now taking is something we cannot stand."

Dumke said it is one thing to toss a Molotov cocktail at a henchman of the Nazi party in pre-World War II days, "but it is quite another to threaten or use violence in America which has a legal system carefully structured to permit itself to be changed by legal means when the occasion warrants."

He urged the 150 representatives from 70 colleges in Arizona, California, Nevada and Hawaii to keep their schools from going "Latin."

The chancellor noted some universities south of the border have lost their identity as an educational institution and "have become a breeding ground and staging area for violent social change."

APPEARING at a panel discussion on the future of higher education in California were George C. S. Benson, president of Claremont Men's College; the Rev. Charles W. Dullea, president of the University of San Francisco; Dr. Robert J. Wert, president of Mills College; and Robert D. Clark, president of San Jose State College.

Benson, who also is a member of the State Coordinating Council for Higher Education, noted there were nine institutions in California offering Doctor of Philosophy degrees. He said state colleges should concentrate on becoming great teaching institutions and should not be thinking of becoming Ph.D. producers.

WEST said higher education will require elimination of required courses in the future and tailoring the four-year curriculum to the needs and desires of individual students.

"This will mean greater emphasis on counseling, fewer lecture courses and more discussion seminars," Wert said.

Father Dullea said the principal contribution a university can make is to instill in students a "real consciousness" of the inequitable distribution of material wealth in the world as a first step to correcting this social problem.

Clark, noting that California has less than 10 per cent of the scholarship funds available in New York State, said public colleges have too few resources to do the job that has to be done of involving them in the problems of the community.

There are many potential movie stars among the actors and actresses, but unfortunately there's only "limited room at the top of the ladder." This condition may be compared to the All America Rose Selections Award Winning Roses that are selected annually on their over-all growing performances at the official rose-testing gardens throughout the United States.

Sometimes rose breeders are in a quandary when they have to decide which ones should be sent to the official rose trials gardens. At times some of the overlooked ones prove to be very good.

ONE of the newer of a number of introduction roses that has a delightful combination of colors — they reflect the same auroral shades one sees when the sun breaks over the Sierras — is Rose Sierra Dawn, a hybrid tea originated by Dr. David I. Armstrong who crossed Helen Traubel and Manitou.

The bright yellow at the base of each petal covers about half of the reverse side, enhancing the coral and salmon tones which predominate. The lovely blossoms provide sweet rose fragrance, seemingly regardless of weather or time of day. The medium-size bush branches freely, which means a plentiful supply of colorful, sweet-scented blossoms.

Ask your nurseryman about other desirable newer introduction roses.

Late rose pruning usually is done by the first third of February, excepting in the colder sectors of Southern California. It is usually optional whether the gardener strips off the remaining old leaves after pruning.

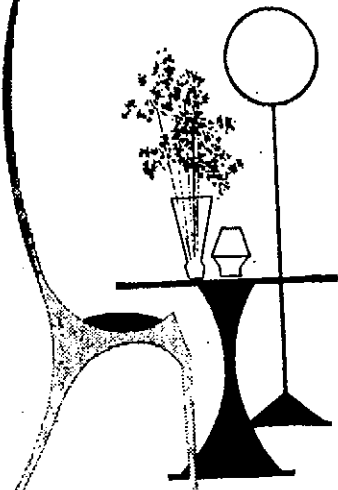

However, if the rose foliage was rust-infested, then the gardener must strip off all the foliage and gather up all the foliage on the ground. This is done to avoid scattering more dormant rust fungus spores that activate and grow during the humid warm weather later.

THE pruned roses should be given a strong "dormant" cleanup spray after they are pruned, provided to do. This safety factor is one of the main reasons why professional gardeners purchase quality grown roses. Home gardeners should, too.

We have helped one of our roses that had crown gall. Using a trowel with a strong handle as a crowbar, we pried and chipped off the growth, then carefully picked up the chips off the ground. The rose bush improved in growth, developed better blossoms and lasted two more years. We replaced it with a new one, first disinfecting the soil with a strong fungicide.

A rosarian hobbyist friend of ours had a similar problem with several of his roses. He not only dug away the hard knobby crown gall around the base of the bushes, but also dug them up, cut off the growths close to the trunks, disinfected the soil, then replanted them. So far, they, too, seem to have taken a new lease on life.

LONG LIVE STINKING HELLBORE!

LONDON (AP) — The drooping saxifrage, spiked speedwell, bristle fern, teasdale sadwort, monkey orchid and 10 other plants have a special friend in Parliament.

Conservative member Peter Mills, a Devonshire farmer, introduced a bill providing a three-month jail term for picking any of these plants he described as rare.

Some not so rare, such as stinking hellbore, bloody cranesbill, fritillary and 22 others, could be picked but not sold.

'PUSHED CANADA'
JFK Criticized
by Diefenbaker

OTTAWA (AP) — Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker said Friday that the late President John F. Kennedy "wanted to run Canada and that's all there is to it." Diefenbaker said that when he resisted, "Kennedy decided he was going to defeat us with the assistance of the Liberal Party."

The 72-year-old Conservative told the Canadian press in an interview that he clashed with Kennedy on nuclear policy in January 1963 shortly before his Conservative minority government fell and was replaced in the April elections by a Liberal government, led by Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson.

Diefenbaker said Kennedy "made available to the Liberals in Toronto an organizer from Washington who directed the plan of attack on my government." He added: "This was Kennedy's method of revenge, and the Liberal party was the beneficiary."

DIEFENBAKER'S REMARKS were in response to a question about a Jan. 30, 1963, statement by the U.S. State Department that Canada was not pulling its weight in North American defense.

Diefenbaker said the statement was made "because Kennedy was not able to push us around — and I use the word push advisedly." Diefenbaker said he had refused to accept U.S. nuclear warheads for the 56 Bomarc anti-aircraft missiles in Canada.

Douglas Harkness resigned as defense minister in the Diefenbaker government because he wanted nuclear weapons for Canadian forces.

Two days after Harkness' resignation, Diefenbaker's administration fell when it lost a confidence vote in the House of Commons.

"The day of the bomber was over," Diefenbaker said. "That has since been proved in Vietnam, where the Americans have dropped more bombs than they did in the Second World War."

Diefenbaker said Kennedy had opposed Canadian wheat sales to Red China, and "he tried to push Canada into the Organization of American States."

House Group Ends Hearing on River Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Interior subcommittee wound up a hearing Friday on bills to authorize a billion dollar Colorado River water project.

The committee heard Interior Department officials at three sessions this week on proposals for a project which would include the Central Arizona project and five smaller reclamation units in Colorado.

The group will begin consideration next Thursday of a Senate-passed bill and a House measure.

Q. Dwarf Meyer lemon in tub is attacked by a worm, in a cocoon near the blossom, which chews its way into the fruit stem after fruit has set. Gardener tried several sprays with no success. What to do? Also, can you give me information on feeding of the citrus? L.A.P.

A. The safe insecticide recommended for fruiting plants is one of several dusts containing a substance that controls sap-sucking and chewing pests, plus a fungicide. Follow directions on the container label. Feed citrus preferably with a balanced plant food containing less nitrogen but more phosphoric acid, plus potash, about mid-March, June and September. Use three-fourths less amount of the fertilizer for your container plant than you would for same size plant growing in the ground. First read fertilizer label sack for feeding instructions.

Q. Where can I find seeds of an annual my neighbor grew in his yard? The seeds were obtained from Hawaii, sown July 1, and by Sept. 1 plants were mature. The foliage had turned brilliant red gold green and yellow. The plants were removed by Nov. 1. Mrs. C.E.A.

A. These plants are an annual Amaranthus "Joseph's Coat" or "Tri-Color" variety. Seeds can be obtained at most nurseries, or plants purchased in pony packs. Don't sow the seeds or set out the plants before May. They love a sunny location and a group of them planted together provide the brightest splash of colors imaginable, as if the plants were aflame!

Tips for the Week

Don't cut back frozen stalks of ginger and cannas, or frozen branches and tops of tropical hibiscus, fuchsias, geraniums or other plants. The plants look messy but wait till new growth develops, then cut them back in March.

Newly sprouted bare root planted roses should not be mulched with manure till the new growth is out about an inch; then spread half an inch layer of manure around the plants.

Purchase some yellow and pink callas. Plant them where they'll get about half sun and half shade.

Feed spring blooming bulbs when they begin to flower. They absorb the plant food before they go dormant. This helps them grow and blossom next year.

Transplant any camellias that need to be moved from one part of the garden to another while they're still in bloom, before new growth starts.

Nixon Refuses Romney Debate

New York Times Service

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, displaying the confidence of a fighter on familiar territory opened his New Hampshire primary campaign Friday by ruling out debates with Gov. George Romney of Michigan.

Nixon said he had decided that debates would not be in the best interest "of the objectives to which both Governor Romney and I are deeply dedicated."

Both men are seeking the Republican presidential nomination.

ROMNEY, considered to be Nixon's chief rival in the nation's first presidential primary here on March 12, recently challenged Nixon to a series of debates.

Nixon also said he would not enter primaries in states where favorite sons were involved. Entering them, he said, would assure the loss of such states in November.

Victory for the Republican Party this year, said Nixon, is "more important than the ambition of one man." He said he believed his background and experience made him the candidate "who can win and can do the job."

The launching of Nixon's campaign was by far the most impressive of any so far this year.

NIXON made jokes at his own expense, and there was none of the scowling and pounding of fist into palm of earlier campaigns.

Asked if he represented a "new Nixon," the former vice president said that he had given much thought to the question and decided that he was "confident without cockiness" about campaigning this time.

Today, Nixon will address a testimonial dinner in his honor at Concord and attend a reception at Ames's College in Manchester, where Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, a Democratic presidential candidate, spoke last week.

THE POLLS here show Nixon well in front of Romney, although the governor has been campaigning with apparent success in the state. Nixon said he also planned "to shake a lot of hands" and conduct a vigorous campaign.

"Yes, and I will try to use television, despite my past record on that score," said Nixon. This was a reference to his televised debates with the late President John F. Kennedy, who defeated Nixon for the presidency in 1960. After the primary March 12, Nixon said he would run in Wisconsin, Indiana, South Dakota and Oregon. He said he had talked to the governors—or their aides—

WIELDS SCISSORS

Police-Stubbing Woman Booked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a pair of seven-inch scissors, a woman pedestrian attacked and wounded two policemen Friday at a downtown intersection.

Alice D. Price, 36, was booked on suspicion of assaulting a police officer with a deadly weapon.

Officer Rudolph Aguilar said he saw Mrs. Price waving her arms and walking against a red light. When he told her to move on, he said, she pulled the shears from her handbag and slashed him on the arm, hand and forehead.

Polluted Inshore Water Called Major Problem

By JACK O. BALDWIN

Pollution of inshore waters Friday was grouped with world peace, international understanding and starvation as one of mankind's greatest problems.

Dr. Edward Wenk Jr., executive secretary, National Council on Marine Resources and Engineering Development, said: "America's stake in the sea is to understand its marine environment and to use that knowledge to effect action for national security, for economic growth, and for the enhancement of the quality of life."

THE COUNCIL secretary spoke to a one-day symposium sponsored by the University of California, at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles.

Quoting Vice President Hubert Humphrey, Dr. Wenk said, "Swimming in our oceans are 30 million Americans; 11 million are saltwater sport fishermen, and eight million engage in recreational boating in our coastal states."

"Yet all these activities are threatened by pollution that will increase sevenfold by the year 2000 unless there are drastic changes in waste handling."

FRANK C. DI LUZIO, member of President Johnson's Commission on Marine Science, Engineering and Resources, claimed pollution control is "crucial to all decisions involving resource use."

"... in calculating the costs and benefits of particular projects, we need to face up to the need for pollution control and include the costs of pollution and to whom," Di Luzio said.

Di Luzio added: "Our technology, institutions and laws are inadequate to cope with major oil pollution disasters (such as the Torrey Canyon) or the smaller polluting incidents that occur daily."

He said the President has authorized a study to determine the scope and nature of the oil pollution problem, the existing capabilities to handle the problem, and recommendations for legislative, fiscal and technical support.

'The Pill' Finds Way to Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—An oral birth control pill, "Based on original Polish technology," is being developed in the state-operated Pola pharmaceutical plant in Jelenia Gora, the Warsaw newspaper Express Wieczorny reported Friday.

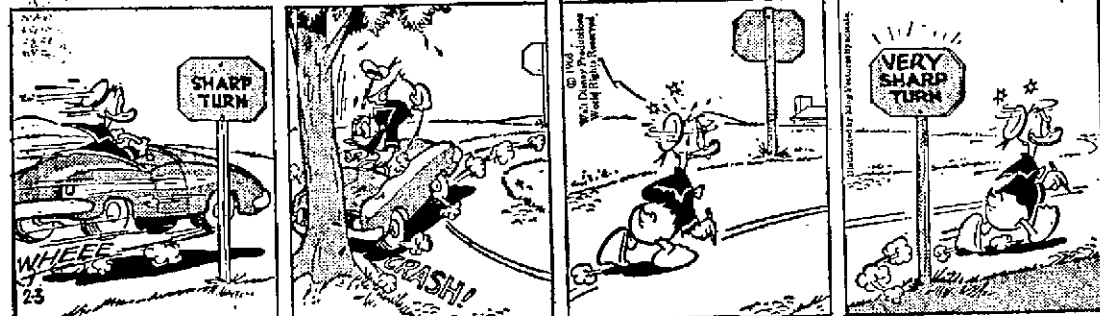

Work on the pill is expected to be completed within a few months, the paper added, and after a trial period will be made available to Poland's predominantly Roman Catholic population around the end of the year.

Electric Hearts May Replace Transplants

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

A Long Beach heart surgeon predicted Friday that medical science will soon solve the heart-transplant problem, and that even greater success stories in surgery will be written.

The surgeon, Dr. James S. Benedict, said new drugs to prevent heart-graft rejection were reported to the medical profession only a few days ago.

Dr. Benedict, speaking in the Petroleum Club at the kickoff luncheon for the 1968 Heart Fund campaign, stated:

"We are on the threshold of finding specific substances to prevent rejection of the human heart."

He was speaking of a phenomenon known as the immune reaction—a tendency of the body to reject tissue foreign to it.

For a graft to "take," steps must be taken to suppress the rejection reaction. The problem has not been altogether solved to date.

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

SATURDAY, FEB. 3, 1968 SECTION B—Page B-1
MARKETS ON PAGES B-2 & B-3

However, when better suppressive drugs are developed, it may even be possible for surgeons "to cross the species line."

Then, it might be possible for surgeons to transplant animal hearts into man, Dr. Benedict noted.

Dr. Benedict said the best answer to heart replacement may turn out to be implantation of an artificial heart.

"My own philosophy is that we must look toward small implantable artificial hearts," he said.

Dr. Benedict said researchers at St. Mary's Hospital in Long Beach are working both on development of an artificial heart and better ways to transplant hearts. Also under investigation, he said, is preservation of donor hearts until time for transplantation surgery.

Dr. Benedict said artificial hearts will probably have to be powered electrically.

One major problem that must be solved in the development of the artificial heart, he said, is to find a mechanical pump that won't damage blood cells.

A number of research teams are working independently on development of the artificial heart, Dr. Benedict said.

Any one of them could come up with the right answers at any time, he added.

Asian Flu Strikes in Calif., L.B. Told

True Asian flu has already struck in California but has failed to spread extensively, health officials disclosed Friday.

The State Health Department, in a memo to the Long Beach Health Department, disclosed that a number of university students in California fell ill to influenza during January.

All had spent the holiday season in Eastern or Midwestern states, where it is presumed the patients were exposed to the influenza virus.

The State Viral and Rickettsial Laboratory, Berkeley, has confirmed that the students were infected with "Type A Asian" influenza, according to Dr. I. D. Litwack, Long Beach health officer.

True influenza has been found so far in Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Alameda, Marin and Santa Clara counties.

But there is no evidence of widespread flu in any California area, the State Health Department emphasized.

Dr. Litwack speculated the flu may have failed to take hold in California because of exposure of residents to the ailment not too long ago.

The phenomenon, he said, may reflect existing immunity to the disease—immunity conferred by having already had the ailment in the near past.

Even though true flu has not broken out widely, there have been marked increases in respiratory and gastrointestinal ailments of short duration, Dr. Litwack said.

The gastrointestinal upsets have been termed "intestinal flu" by some persons—although there is no such disease.

Propose Health Aid Hike for L.B.

From Our L.A. Bureau

County Chief Administrative Officer Lindon S. Hollinger Friday recommended $82,809 more in county-health funds to Long Beach, then took a slap at smaller governmental agencies.

Hollinger cut back the original Long Beach request for a county outlay of $861,651 to help run the municipal health department.

He said a county staff analysis shows Long Beach should be able to get by on less—$836,415—reflected in the final recommended increase. The present county contract provides $753,606 a year to Long Beach for health services.

"The difference between the city request and our analysis of county requirements generally reflects the ability of a large centralized agency, such as the County Health Department, to absorb minor increases in workload without proportionate over-all staffing increases," he said.

The Hollinger statement came a few days before the Dominguez-Carson incorporation election—where county-service contracts will be one of the issues if a city is formed.

Hollinger's statement also was in keeping with past county policy to try to take over municipal services.

Ridings, Cameron Named L.B. Salesmen of the Year

Two civic leaders who played a major role in bringing the Queen Mary to Long Beach were named "Salesmen of the Year" Friday by the city's Sales and Marketing Executives.

Sam Cameron, Independent Press-Telegram general manager, and H. E. (Bud) Ridings Jr., harbor commissioner, were honored at a banquet attended by 300 persons in the Petroleum Club, 3636 Linden Ave.

L.B. Building Gets Off to Average Start in '68

Construction in Long Beach got off to about an average start in January. The City Building Department issued permits for a total valuation of $4,473,965.

The total was considerably under the January, 1967, valuation of $7.5 million, but that figure was largely the result of two major permits: a $2.6 million warehouse for Douglas Aircraft Co. and a $1.4 million department store at 4550 Atlantic Ave.

Residential construction showed strength last month. Permits were issued for 21 single-family dwellings, two duplexes and four apartments with a total of 16 units. This total of 41 dwelling units accounted for $818,100 of the month's valuation.

In January last year, by comparison, only 14 new residential units were issued permits.

Total valuation last month include $3,602,915 in building, $309,415 in plumbing and $561,635 in electrical work. Of the total, $2.7 million was for new construction and $901,500 for alterations and repairs.

The new projects included a $260,000, 78-unit addition to a motel, a $225,000 church, three industrial buildings valued at $472,100, a $398,000 convalescent hospital and three office buildings totaling $176,525.

MRS. MARY DOWD... Back from World Travels

SHIP WAS SCHOOL

Frosh Coed, 70, Home From Sea

By BARBARA KNESIS

A zebra skin sprawled across the living room rug. A wooden mask worn by African tribal dancers more than 200 years ago for happy occasions sat on a nearby table. A psychedelic trunk and assorted travel cases rested in the corner.

Mrs. Mary (Ga Ga) Dowd, Seal Beach's 70-year-old coed, was back from her first semester of college.

The freshman grandmother had been aboard Chapman College's World Campus Afloat—with more than 500 liberal arts students—as it cruised into such ports as Japan, India, Thailand, Hawaii, mixing travel and study.

THE TALL, SLENDER Mrs. Dowd stood in the middle of her daughter's Huntington Beach home wrapping herself in sheer black cloth while her son-in-law, daughter and grandson watched.

"It goes something like this," she said as she tried without immediate success to demonstrate the art of sari making.

"I got to work this thing out, so excuse me while I try."

She tucked an edge of cloth in, played a bit more and, when at last she was satisfied, she took it off, folded it up and sat down.

The silver-haired coed looked at her grandson, Ed Shomaker, and said, "He was the one who started the whole thing, and everybody all over the world knows it too."

MRS. DOWD SAID her grandson was on the SS Ryndam last spring, and when he returned he told her, "Grandmother this is for you."

Then he began to tutor her. It had been 51 years since Mrs. Dowd was graduated from high school in Wauwatosa, Wis.

There was a bit of brushing up to do since she was required to go through the rituals that face all college freshmen.

Her eyes twinkled as she said, "They did make one exception. All the other incoming freshmen needed letters of recommendation from their high school principals and teachers. I didn't. Mine were all dead."

THE LEISURE WORLD resident—oldest freshman the college ever enrolled—said she had no special privileges because of her age, and no special problems either.

"I have six grandchildren and that kind of oriented me," she said.

"All the kids accepted me... included me in all their doings... never made me feel like an old biddy."

"I did get aced out of two goodies. Anyone over 26 wasn't allowed to take physical education and I couldn't get student's rates," she said.

Mrs. Dowd's rapport with students was so good, Chapman College officials have invited her back as a student assistant on another voyage. It's a working cruise.

"I THINK THE students looked at me as their mother image," she said, "An awful lot of them would come to my cabin just to talk. I was kind of a counselor."

"You know," Mrs. Dowd said, changing the subject, "everyone thinks of this cruise as a play cruise, but it's not. It's a working cruise."

She had classes in art, world cultures and world religions six days a week.

"Imagine trying to work in an art class with 50-foot waves. Our motto was flexibility," she said, laughing about two Atlantic storms.

Ahead of her was a job unpacking her trunk, needed by her grandson who was scheduled to go aboard the Chapman College "floating classroom" before it sails at 4 p.m. today on the spring semester voyage.

The recollections, revisited memories and recalled chuckles would have to wait.

Find Sailor Guilty in Stabbing Death

By BOB SANDERS

Former sailor Roberto Arocha Friday was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the stab-slaying of a 78-year-old Long Beach cafe owner.

Superior Court Judge Donald Dunbar, who heard the case without a jury, set a probation and sentence hearing March 7 for the 21-year-old Arocha in Department E of Superior Court.

Arocha, a sailor attached to the USS Navarro at the time of the slaying, stabbed Glenn Wesley Rhodes, proprietor of Helen's Coffee Shop at 801 E. Third St. twice in the chest last May 30 with a three-inch pocket knife.

Investigators traced Arocha through a paper plate on which the names of the high scorers in the shooting gallery game had been scribbled.

Police said Arocha told two of his sailor friends, after leaving the coffee shop, he was going to go back and "take care of the old man."

Rhodes was found bleeding to death on the steps leading from the cafe up to his apartment by his wife, Helen, who said she heard her husband call her name and scream for help.

Arocha, dressed in a tan sweater and white shirt open at the neck, listened without expression to the final arguments of Deputy Dist. Atty. Charles Sheldon and Defense Atty. Kenneth Rosenstock Friday, then lowered his eyes to the floor as Judge Dunbar read the verdict.

Find Youth Dead on Rocky Beach

The body of a Palos Verdes High School junior was found Friday crumpled on the rocky beach of Luna Bay, where it apparently lay for several hours after the youth fell from a 200-foot cliff.

Police said the death of William Roy Inman Jr., 17, of 1549 Granvia Altamira, Palos Verdes Estates, was accidental.

The body was discovered by a Torrance youth, Glenn Mitchell, 18, of 4735 Narrot St., who spotted it while walking along the cliff top and called Palos Verdes Estates police at 12:06 p.m.

The victim, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Inman, disappeared from home Tuesday, but the parents had not filed a missing person report, officers said.

Police summoned a Coast

Guard helicopter to raise the body from the narrow beach to the cliff top.

Officers said identification of the youth was difficult but they found a scrap of paper with his name on it in his jeans and determined his home address by checking with the high school. The identification was confirmed by his father.

The youth had been registered at the school in January and previously attended private schools, according to police.

Funeral arrangements are pending at White and Day Mortuary, Redondo Beach.

3 Cities Approve Helicopter Patrol

By RALPH McCLURG

The cities of Downey, Santa Fe Springs and Norwalk are the first of eight cities to approve a joint powers agreement which will provide helicopter patrol to augment law enforcement services in a proposed Southeast Regional area.

If approved by the other cities—Pico Rivera, La Mirada, Bell Gardens, Commerce and Whittier—the agreement with the Sheriff's office will go into effect July 1.

The proposal provides for Sky Knight patrol for a two year period. Cost breakdown for the first year is Downey, $53,690; Norwalk $45,010; and Santa Fe Springs $27,600.

Tuesday, the county Board of Supervisors, without comment, turned a proposal by Sheriff Peter Pitchess for a county-wide helicopter patrol over to its administrative officer for study and a report.

The Sheriff based his recommendation on a report from the 18-month Lakewood Sky Knight program, which showed that robberies in that city declined 8 per cent.

Pitchess urged supervisors to allocate $2 million to purchase 20 helicopters for use in areas of the metropolitan basin which do not presently have the aerial patrol.

Following the 18-month trial period, Lakewood officials purchased three helicopters to be operated by sheriff's deputies. Neighboring cities of Artesia, Bellflower, Hawaiian Gardens, Cerritos and Paramount also participate in the helicopter crime patrol.

7 L.B. Area Cities' Sales Volume Rises

The volume of sales—on which state taxes are levied—went up in seven cities of southeast Los Angeles County and fell in six in the third quarter of 1967, compared with the same period last year, according to a State Board of Equalization preliminary report.

Downey showed the top increase of 15.5 per cent, for sales volume of $48,937,000 during the 1967 quarter.

Bellflower reported a slight decline, the report listing 3 per cent less taxable sales, but local officials expect a final adjustment for the quarter's last month will put it above the 1966 rate.

Increases in other cities are: Lakewood and Santa Fe Springs, 6 per cent; Pico Rivera 7 per cent; South Gate 9.6 per cent; Whittier, 6.5 per cent, and Montebello, 1.5 per cent.

Declines were listed as follows: Compton, 4.1 per cent; Huntington Park, 3 per cent; Lynwood, 2.4 per cent; Norwalk, 10.5 per cent and Paramount, 3.9 per cent.

Final reports will modify the figures when complete payments for the quarter on allocations of tax shares to cities for local use.

Some short-term recovery would be expected soon. However, no significant rebound can be predicted yet since the recent improvement was not based on either consolidation or a sharp reversal of the last decline. The prolonged period of selling pressure, illustrated by the fact that the market had retreated on 15 of 17 consecutive sessions, indicates an oversold condition. Not only is the market oversold but also most major averages and indices have retreated to significant support levels.

The market is on trial. Since the principal reason for the last decline was a default by the buyers, a broad improvement in the tape action is needed to restore a significant level of confidence and interest. Sluggishness on the upside will continue to leave the over-all picture suspect and will seriously limit the trading opportunities of any recovery.

BASED ON the expectation of at least a partial retracement of the sharp losses during the last market correction of over 60 DJI points, we have reviewed our technical studies to find issues that have shown good relative strength and significant accumulation during the entire decline. These issues are: Ashland Oil, First Charter Financial, General Time, Great Western Financial, High Voltage Engineering, McDonnell Douglas, Republic Corp., St. Regis Paper, Sunray DX and Vornado. These stocks must be considered to be among the strongest and they should benefit from any real recovery by the market.

On four occasions in the past the level of 840-850 has represented a low point for previous market corrections. Now the failure to hold such a level would provide even more ammunition for the nay-sayers, since this would represent a down signal according to the Dow theory. As long as the 830-840 level holds the over-all trend will remain neutral.

THERE HAS recently been a negative bias in the large block transactions, although not enough to indicate a significant level of distribution. Indecision has been the distance among the professional and institutional traders during the past few months. No definite trend is expected in the market until this stalemate has been resolved.

Among the issues under large-scale accumulation which are regarded favorably on a technical basis are: Great Western Financial, St. Regis Paper, National General, McDonnell Douglas, Ashland Oil, General Time, Republic Corp. Among the issues under large-scale distribution which are regarded unfavorably are: Litton, Continental Air Lines, American Cyanamid, Fairchild Camera, Inc. Carbide.

The previous upsurge among the blue chips — American Telephone & Telegraph, U.S. Steel, Standard Oil of New Jersey — has left them more favorably situated the longer term. However, neither dynamic leadership nor outstanding trading opportunities are apparent in the area.

THE GLAMORS — Xerox, Itek, Polaroid — continue to show relative weakness. Therefore, no more than a bound from a generally oversold condition is expected. And this limits trading opportunities in this area. Only the special situations — merger, tender, and arbitrage situations; low-priced issues such as American Photocopying, Brunswick, Great Western Financial, Glen Alden, and extremely volatile stocks such as AMK Corp., Republic of America, American Export Industries, Fuqua — have given a fair account of themselves during recent trading. However, these represent sophisticated situations, and should be of interest only to the most experienced and informed speculators.

The extent of the recent market decline has tempered most of our near-term recommendations sluggish. The overall picture remains positive for Chrysler, White Motors, United Fruit, 20th Century-Fox. However, any further rebound from current levels would suggest selling opportunities. The near-term trend turns dynamic again.

REV. FITCH
At Los Altos

Methodists Will Hear 3 Views

Negro, Jewish and Roman Catholic clerics will be hosted on successive Sunday nights by Los Altos Methodist Church, 5950 Willow St., in a "Mission in Understanding" program which will be climaxed on the fourth Sunday evening by a joint musical program of all three, plus the host congregation.

"Black Man, American, Christian" will be the subject this Sunday of guest Rev. Douglas Fitch, pastor of Epworth Methodist Church of Los Angeles. Program begins at 6 p.m., following a 5 p.m. potluck supper. The general public is invited.

Rev. Fitch is a graduate of Greenville College, Ill., and Gammon Theological Seminary in Atlanta, and was a social worker in San Bernardino before being called to the Epworth post. He will bring members of his congregation to the dinner and program.

First thing we senior citizens did when we took over at Moore Methodist, 3rd at Linden, was to send free buses for all old men and women who are forgotten by their churches, and to have plans, tables to walk to any church. Scores of them come every Sunday and you would find them the friendliest folks this side of Heaven. Sit and talk with them as you have a snack after 11 A.M. service. They need you. Have you need them too.

ATTITUDE CHANGE GREATEST AMONG CATHOLICS

Views of Other Faiths Told in Candid Session

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

After centuries of strife, the world's great religions are moving into a new era of mutual respect and cordiality.

The changed climate was strikingly evident at a conference on interreligious understanding held in Washington, D.C. It was sponsored by the Temple of Understanding Inc., a seven-year-old nonprofit corporation which seeks to advance religious harmony.

Participating were representatives of Roman Catholic and Protestant Christianity, Judaism, Islam, Buddhism, Hinduism and Confucianism. The question put to each speaker was: "What validity does your faith accord to other religions?"

Rev. Dr. John Haughey, professor of theology at Georgetown University, said the Roman Catholic view of other faiths has undergone significant change since the Vatican Council. Without abandoning belief in the uniqueness of Jesus Christ as sole mediator between God and man, Catholicism today officially acknowledges that "authentic religious perception has existed and continues to exist outside Christianity" and there are "good and holy" things to be found in other religions.

He said this new attitude is "not a subtle conversion strategy" but a sincere recognition that "the Christ for whom we labor is already present," although anonymously, in all of man's aspirations toward God.

Rev. Dr. Lowell Russell Ditzgen, director of the National Presbyterian Center, while disavowing any attempt to speak for all Protestants, expressed the conviction that the majority of his co-religionists today are "ready to listen, to learn from, cooperate with and appreciate the values of" other faiths.

He said Protestant Christianity must continue to be a "missionary religion" because it operates under a clear mandate from its Lord to preach His gospel to all nations. But it can and will work with other faiths, in a spirit of mutual respect, toward practical goals of justice and peace which all have in common.

Dr. Isaac Franck, executive vice president of the Jewish Community Council of Greater Washington, said Judaism "judges men by their conduct but passes no judgment on their theology." It teaches that "Judaism is the only valid religion for the Jewish people" but acknowledges that "different peoples seek God in different particular ways, each being valid for the people that have chosen it." For this reason, he said, Judaism traditionally has refrained from actively seeking converts from other faiths.

The Moslem view was voiced by Dr. Ali H. Abdel Kader, director of the Islamic Center in Washington. He said Islam has always regarded Moses, Jesus and Buddha as true prophets of God, but insists that Mohammed was "the seal of the prophets" — the only one to whom God revealed his truth "in its entirety." Therefore, while granting religious freedom to Jews and Christians who live in Moslem-governed territories, Islam holds that it is "the true religion" and no other religion is fully acceptable to God.

Bishop Shinsho Hanayama of San Francisco, head of the Buddhist Churches of America, said Buddhism "considers all different religious traditions to be paths to the same summit." While it believes that Buddhism is the shortest and straightest path, it teaches that "even the most winding donkey trail" can lead ultimately to the top.

Confucianism, the ancient religion of China, is "certainly among the most tolerant of all religions toward other faiths and creeds," said Dr. Wen Yen Tsao, professor of East Asian studies at Milligan College, Tennessee. He said it was a basic teaching of

Confucius that "all religions are valid."

Sir M.G. Raja Ram, cultural minister of the Indian Embassy, said Hinduism "has always believed in a diversified approach to a common goal" and holds that "even the most crude religion has its place in the scheme of things." He quoted from an old Indian folk song:

"Into the bosom of the one great sea
Flow streams that come from hills on every side."

"Their names are various as their springs,
And thus in every land do men bow down

Episcopal Bishop Tours Pendleton

Climaxing a visit of military installations on the West Coast, Right Rev. Arnold M. Lewis, Episcopal Bishop for the Armed Forces, visited training facilities at Camp Pendleton.

After observing an M-16

quick firing demonstration the bishop joined Maj. Gen. Lewis J. Fields, Camp Pendleton base commander on a tour of the Ranch House and Chapel, the oldest structures at Camp Pendleton.

5 PROTESTANT LEADERS Praise LBJ on Handling of Pueblo Grab

United Press International

Some church leaders who have been critical of President Johnson over Vietnam are praising him for his handling of the new Asian crisis provoked by North Korea's seizure of the U.S. ship Pueblo.

The President received this week a telegram signed by the leaders of five major Protestant bodies with 19 million members. They commended him for "the restraint and patience which you are demonstrating" in trying to find a diplomatic solution.

The telegram was signed by Rev. Dr. Ben M. Herberster, president of the United Church of Christ; William P. Thompson, stated clerk of the United Presbyterian Church; Bishop Donald H. Tippett, president of the Methodist Council of Bishops; Rev. Dr. A. Dale Fiers, executive secretary of the International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples-of-Christ); and Dr. Frank E. Johnson, associate general secretary of the American Baptist Convention.

"We do not question the wisdom of conducting missions of the kind to which the Pueblo was assigned," they said. "We are deeply concerned over the welfare and safety of members of her crew... We understand the need for you to prepare to meet further unprovoked armed aggression."

But the Protestant leaders said they "also believe that this great nation should not and need not be provoked into the hasty use of armed force" in response to North Korea's "brazen and unprovoked aggression."

They urged the President to "continue your efforts to resolve the Pueblo incident by diplomatic means," and commended him for referring the problem to the United Nations Security Council.

"We do not pretend to speak for all of the 19 million members of our churches," they said, "but we know that the vast majority of them long for peace and abhor war."

Challenge to Gloomy Gus

HOW TO ENJOY THIS MOMENT, By Samuel Silver. Trident, $4.95.

Dr. Silver, a rabbi in Stamford, Conn., has culled familiar and unfamiliar quotations from the wisdom of the ages for this inventory on how to achieve a daily festival of happiness through optimism, friendship and universal brotherhood.

He suggests that everyone concerned with making the most of life keep a personal "charge card" for wallet or purse with quotations of words, phrases or sentences to be used as permanent suggestions whenever the spirit needs recharging. Two of his cards may be detached from the inside flap of the dust cover; one bears this inspirational bit by the author: "O God, as I go to sleep to-night I pray to you with all my might—Help me to be gay and bright—Always be my parents' delight—And teach me to enjoy what's right."

All should grasp, he insists, for the bouquet Adlai Stevenson gave to Eleanor Roosevelt when he eulogized her: "She would rather light a candle than curse the darkness."

REVIVALIST

Gladys Pearson, whose evangelical ministry has taken her to 26 countries, including Communist-led lands, will begin a series of services Sunday, 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., at Bethany Chapel, Sixth Street and Dawson Avenue, and continuing at 7:30 weeknights except Monday.

CONFIDENT LIVING It Seemed an Impossible Idea

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

A terrific idea hit teenager Bill Danforth during class one day. In a couple of minutes something happened that affected the whole course of his life.

Mr. Krall, the teacher, had launched into one of his tirades on health. He was considered a fanatic on the subject. It was his pet theme. The boys were used to his lectures, so mostly shrugged them off. But this time Mr. Krall, eyes flashing, pointed straight at him and said: "Bill, I dare you to be the healthiest boy in this class!"

Bill was jolted to attention. It seemed an impossible idea! Of all boys in class he was the least robust. He was thin, scrawny, sickly. Living in marshy farm country he had a notion that he was full of "swamp poisons." And he had been told glumly that unless he used real caution he would probably not live long. So he took poor health for granted.

But the teacher's insistent voice rang on and got through to him this time: "I dare you to chase those chills and fevers out of your system. I dare you to fill your body with fresh air, pure water, wholesome food and daily exercise until your cheeks are red, your chest full, your legs strong..."

A RESPONSE came welling up from the depths of the boy's being and surged through him. He felt the fire of victory over self. The older man's enthusiasm and conviction had roused in him a will to overcome; and inwardly he took the dare—he would make himself healthy and strong.

And the boy held to that challenge. He did develop a rugged physique. Moreover, this first taste of achieving set the key for an outstanding career. Eventually he became chairman of the board of Ralston Purina Company.

I last saw William H. Danforth at age 86. It was in a crowded lobby of a St. Louis hotel. I asked, "How do you maintain your magnificent physical condition? Let me in on your secret!" He needed no encouragement. "I will show you the exercises I do." And proceeded to put himself through a series of calisthenics, unconscious of the numerous bystanders gathered to watch.

Mr. Danforth wrote a little book called "I Dare You," in which he challenged people to activate their latent powers. For example, a salesman once came to his office and said dispiritedly, "Mr. Danforth, I'm going to quit."

"Why? Give me one good reason why," snapped Danforth.

"Because I'm just no salesman," the man answered. "I don't have the ability or the nerve. So I'm quitting."

Danforth looked him long and straight in the eye and said, "If I know how to evaluate—you have all the qualifications of a producing salesman. So I dare you to get out of here right now and come back with more orders than you ever got in a single day. I dare you! Get going!" Instantly he saw in the salesman's eyes a gleam of battle. He turned on his heel and walked out. That night he came back exhilarated. He had done precisely what his boss had dared him to do. He had topped his previous record. He went on to become one of the best producers in the company.

AN OLD saying declares: "When fate throws a dagger at you, there are two ways to catch it: either by the blade or by the handle." Catch the dagger by the blade and it may cut you, perhaps injure you. But if you catch it by the handle you can use it to fight your way through. When faced with a big obstacle seize it by the handle. In other words, let a challenge rouse your fighting spirit. You can't get anywhere without a good fighting spirit. So get it going. It will draw your latent powers into action.

Remember that you are spiritually conditioned and, as such, have within you what it takes to overcome even the seemingly impossible. Pit that inner resistant power against any obstacle confronting you.

A contractor who often has to drill through solid rock to lay pipes says it pretty well: "When the rock is hard we get harder than the rock. When the job is tough we get tougher than the job."

Don't let any obstacle stop you.

PETER MERRICK

New Minister at NLB Church

North Long Beach Church of Christ, at 1128 E. Artesia Blvd., has called Peter Merrick as its new minister. Merrick, a native New Zealander, has been preaching 10 years though he is only 26.

After graduating from Freed-Hardeman College in Tennessee in 1961, he returned to his native land, where he worked until returning here with his wife, Paula Sue, formerly of Yucaipa and their three children. He is taking additional work at Pepperdine College.

Mr. Merrick returns to Wellington, New Zealand this month to be the principal speaker in a three week "campaign for Christ."

FROM THE PULPIT

Music affects most everyone in some way. Not all people respond to the same type or sounds of music. Some folk respond to the strains of music, while others respond to the heart and the message of music. Church music must also vary. It cannot all be of one type, else many people of a congregation never benefit from the ministry of music.

Calvary is a musical church. The ministry of our musical program is in keeping with the other ministries of the church—warm, personal, and with an appeal to the heart. The famous STAMPS QUARTET will sing here this Sunday night. This nationally-known quartet specializes in southern gospel singing—music designed to express the emotions of a redeemed sinner to his God through Christ. Listen every Sunday morning to our broadcast. Station and time are listed below.

'Good News' Hits 9 Million

The American Bible Society disclosed this week that its runaway best-seller, "Good News for Modern Man," has passed the nine million mark in sales.

"Good News" is the New Testament in an easy-to-read, idiomatic modern translation called the "Today's English Version" or "TEV." It's available through Bible Society offices and many local churches in a paperback edition priced at 35 cents, and a vinyl-covered edition which costs $1. The society barely breaks even at these prices, but it is concerned not with making money but with making the scriptures available to as many persons as possible.

The huge sales of "Good News" came as a complete surprise to society officials. When it was first published, a little more than a year ago, they figured they'd do well to distribute a million copies the first year.

"A BIBLE TEACHING CHURCH"

About 'Inner City' Work; Free-Swinging Letters

By LES RODNEY

Is there merit in a point recently made by a religious leader that suburban church and synagogue members might volunteer in greater numbers or inner-city service projects if they are confronted with realistic, modest, practical, clearly-defined things to do?

At present, suggests Rabbi Richard J. Israel, chaplain to Jewish students at Yale, "religious institutions are not structured" to realistically send the average well-meaning person out for inner-city service. (It is not state secret that "inner city" today means just plain old-fashioned poor folks, in the majority of cases, though not altogether, darker-skinned Americans.)

"People are shy and afraid," says the rabbi. "They don't especially want to be confronted by hostile or 'different' people, and so they don't want to confront the conditions of the inner city. The immensity of the problem makes them feel guilty about their own comfortable lives."

Vague exhortations to "do something" about the ghetto's plight do not produce much action. Rabbi Israel recommends that professional social service agencies let suburbanites "know what they can do beyond sending Thanksgiving turkeys — and let them know in terms that are realistic for middle class church or synagogue members."

"It's easy to condemn religious people for not living up to the ideals they claim to hold," he concludes. "It's more useful to give them tasks about which they can actually do something."

The rabbi wasn't trying to touch all bases on this big topic, but it might be added that one of the practical preparations for overcoming the suburban fear of the "different" is some preliminary low-pressure social interchange. Yes, the kind of church exchange programs sometimes derided as "meaningless" and "tokenism."

Certainly these programs are not the basic solutions to anything. But they have been found useful in local churches in giving their people a more relaxed feeling, plus renewed appreciation for the basic dignity of all kinds of people, as opposed to some the caricatures that take shape in a vacuum.

Incidentally, from all reports, one of the more thoughtful local pioneering efforts in this direction of practical outreach is to be found at Grace Methodist Church.

WOULD YOU believe it is 25 years — to the day — since four young chaplains of different faiths, arms linked in calm prayer to the one God they all served, went down into the city waters of Greenland with the torpedoed troopship Dorchester?

Subsequently immortalized as The Four Chaplains, they had dispensed life belts and encouragement during the panic and confusion, and when the supply ran out, took off their own and handed them to four more men who were about to jump. Then they took each other by the arm and went down with the ship — together. At a time when the word "ecumenical" would have brought a "come again?"

Local memorial observance will be Monday at noon in the American Legion Hall, 3252 Florista St., Los Alamitos, advises Chaplain Ed Gaethke.

IN ITS unusual free-swinging style, the conservative evangelical magazine Christianity Today printed a lively sampling of letters it received commenting on its article "NCC Hosts the Radicals," which dealt (rather harshly) with a National Council of Churches conclave at Detroit.

A letter of praise by Harold Lindell, professor of Bible at Wheaton College, said "I think you are hitting the right target when you go after the NCC and its revolutionary strategy. They are to be commended for their frankness... They employ situational ethics — that the end justifies the means — and forget that nowhere did the Lord Jesus use force or encourage force. They violate the concept of voluntarism. Even Paul, when he rebuked churches, did not use his apostolic office to force them. He used moral persuasion."

On the other side of the fence, a letter by Alan Kiefhaber of Franklin Grove, Ill. says: "I have looked in the New Testament for the Christ who make no economic pronouncements, did not disrupt public life, never challenged practices used by governments nor engaged in civil disobedience. Perhaps if I look long enough I shall find him."

In denouncing the Detroit conference, kindly refrain from placing guns in the hands of all "liberals" and NCC affiliates. We will try to avoid lumping you together with the most radical and unsavory of the self-styled 'evangelicals.'"

A Roman Catholic, Paul Peachey, associate professor of Sociology in Catholic University at Washington, gets into the Protestant argument with this comment: "...there is the old stone-throwing problem for people in glass houses. Isn't Christianity today caught in the same anomaly... violence is justifiable in Vietnam but deplorable at home? What is the measuring stick? If fallen man's lot means grin and bear it domestically, why not internationally? Conversely, if human depravity compels us to accept or resort to violence internationally, can't the same case be made in domestic injustice?"

"I do not speak from a 'plague' on both your houses' stance. God only knows the depth and complexity of all these problems, and the puniness of all our proposals... If the nature of the problem makes all the difference, then how does one distinguish evangelicals from liberals?"

AND SPEAKING of that hardy, perennial topic of "social action," you might find interesting a recent comment by the Rt. Rev. Paul Moore Jr., suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, D.C. to a diocesan convention: "I resist with all my being the church becoming just a social action or service institution, as much as I resist the church withdrawing from the struggles and issues which surround us. Without the life of worship at its heart, social work and action can soon lose vitality, or become bitter and violent. On the other hand, the church without social involvement soon becomes a place of false spirituality divorced from the flesh which God put on in Jesus Christ."

CHURCH HUMOR

Latin Violence Explored

The fifth annual Catholic Inter-American Cooperation Program (CICOP) closed this week in St. Louis with a declaration that the Christian Church has the resources to understand and participate in revolutionary struggles for social reconstruction.

Dr. Richard Shaull, professor of ecumenics at Princeton Theological Seminary, told delegates from Europe, Canada, Latin America and the United States:

"When the old order is no longer able to serve men adequately and is too sclerotic to change fast enough to keep up with events, it will have to be brought down or broken open by conflict and violence of one sort or another, and the dynamics of God's action in the world moves in that direction."

"In that situation, the violence of the struggle will be determined primarily by those in power, for it is up to them to decide whether the old can make way for the new without total confrontation and disruption. This does not justify any use of violence at any time by the agents of social change, but it does put the primary responsibility for dealing with this question where it belongs."

Tells Aim of 'Survival' Grouping

A charter has been issued by the state to "National United Effort for Survival Inc." headed by Elder James McWilliams of Long Beach, an evangelist for racial harmony.

At an open meeting and banquet at Howard Johnson's Restaurant, Rev. Jeff P. Frazier was named secretary treasurer, with board members Arthur Jackson, Rev. Andrew Lee Galthor, John E. Booser and Edna L. Booser.

McWilliams explains the purpose of the organization as follows:

"It is a nondenominational coordinating public service agency for all races designed to promote racial harmony and assist local and federal government in their efforts to reduce the serious crime wave."

"Activities will include lectures by prominent people in the field of human relations, presentation of radio and television programs, and circulation of periodicals to implement the ideas and principles."

"Survival of America depends wholly on the collective effort of all citizens, working in unity on a national scale, understanding the enemy's source of power and methods employed to divide and conquer our nation."

"Racial Inharmony makes national unity impossible, and without national unity we are a nation divided against ourselves. As it is written in the Scriptures so shall it be: 'A house divided against itself shall not stand."

"Therefore, I sincerely call for a united stand against all forms of subversive activity, by all citizens who are concerned about survival and a greater future for America, a future with honor and respect by all nations who are also seeking their way out of darkness due to moral decay."

Girl of a Thousand Voices

By GENE HANDSAKER
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — She's a tiny thing, with auburn hair, sparkling eyes and a remarkable vocal range — from babies and birds to sexy dames, doting grandmas and cackling witches.

For 20 years a frequent cry from Hollywood producers with feminine-voice problems has been, "Get June Foray."

She earns $250 an hour and is probably Hollywood's top woman practitioner of the obscure trade listed in her modest 2½ lines in the Motion Picture Almanac: voice specialist.

Ann Sheridan died before she could re-record dialogue for her last television show that extraneous noises had ruined in the sound track.

Miss Foray, after listening carefully to Miss Sheridan's voice, did the re-recording, matching the words to Ann's lip movements.

"Sometimes the producer will add dialogue after the star has gone, say, to Europe," said June. "It's cheaper and quicker to have me do it than bring her back."

"And a lot of young actresses whom I can't mention do a lousy job and they call me in to pull them out of the soup by replacing their voices. How did they get the job in the first place? Because they look good."

On a "Rawhide" she re-recorded the entire dialogue of one week's guest star.

It takes Miss Foray, who works almost constantly, to remember all the voices she supplies, especially in television.

"I'm Axis Sally in '12 o'Clock High,' Knothead and Splinter on 'Woody Woodpecker,' and I'm all over the dial on the Saturday cartoon shows."

Her voice changes as she describes various roles: "I do French girls, Cockney accent, Svenska, and ah do Suth'n dialects."

The secret is "having a good ear and flexible vocal cords."

BORN in Springfield, Mass., Miss Foray came to Hollywood with her parents at 17 and started a local radio show, writing and playing all the parts, then graduated to network radio.

She lives in suburban Woodland Hills with her writer husband, Hobart Donovan; two terrifyingly friendly great Danes weighing a combined 345 pounds, and a withdrawn, 14-year-old cat named Henry.

Miss Foray supplies nearly all the witches' voices used in Hollywood. Pat Buttram once asked her to do one over the telephone when he had a local radio program.

"When I got through doing that cackling, hee-hee-hee voice," she recalls, "there were 15 people standing around the phone booth wondering what this nut was doing."

CHP Joining FBI Network on Crime Info

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department Friday announced allocation of $295,000 to allow 36 state and local law enforcement agencies to participate in the National Crime Information Center network.

Established a year ago by the FBI, the center is a computerized index of information on crime and criminals connected by a coast to coast communications network.

The money comes from the Law Enforcement Assistance Program.

Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark said that by mid year, he was hopeful all states would be connected to the network.

Those being connected under the new fund allocation included:

Arizona Highway Patrol, California Department of Justice, California Highway Patrol, and Idaho State Police.

State VA Spends $648 Million

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Veterans Administration said Friday that approximately $648.2 million of the $7 billion in expenditures by the VA last year was spent in California.

Of this, the VA paid out an estimated $375.6 million in compensation and pension benefits to 377,800 California veterans or their survivors, said Mort Webster, manager of the VA regional office here.

Before permitting him to bail out, the sergeant carefully repeated his instructions, which were, "Remember now—once you're out there—count to 5, then pull the rip-cord! A jeep down below will watch your direction of drift, pick you up after you land and bring you back to the barracks!"

With a show of bravado, the youngster leaped out, counted to 5—but the chute failed to open. While his descent accelerated, completely unimpeded, he growled to himself, "I never did trust that double-crossing sergeant! I'll bet that jeep ain't there neither."

Luckily, folks, this type of mishap will disappear as soon as the West Germans market their new "Maxwell-Haus" parachute—good 'til the last drop!"

Folks, if that old car is just costing too much—let MEDER bail you out! Harbor Chevrolet, 3770 Cherry. GA 6-3341

Spencer, Quarry Go Today

Combined News Services

OAKLAND — Thad Spencer, still the needler, and Jerry Quarry, showing Irish irritation at Thad's jibes, went into virtual seclusion Friday on the eve of today's fight.

Their bout could lead the winner to the world heavy-weight championship—and millions of dollars.

Las Vegas' bookmakers made Spencer a 2-3 favorite Friday. Quarry was a 13-10 underdog.

They weighed in Friday morning, Quarry at 193½ and Spencer 200½.

Quarry, with 14 kayos in a 25-1-4 record, is known as a boxer, although his 32-5 record includes 13 knockouts.

Th fight will be televised throughout the United States—except within 150 miles of Oakland—and Mexico City, and via satellite to Europe and Japan. There will be no radio.

The fight is the second semifinal in the World Boxing Assn. elimination series to pick a successor to Cassius Clay, from whom it lifted the championship after he refused to answer the military draft.

Jimmy Ellis won the other semifinal and awaits the Spencer-Quarry winner for a title fight in March or April.

Quarry, a matter-of-fact 22-year-old from Los Angeles, and Spencer both have forecast victory without unbecoming modesty.

"Quarry is just a kid," says the 24-year-old Spencer, who started pro boxing five years earlier. "He's meeting me too soon. He's also done some 'mouthing' and I plan to chastise him a little."

In other pre-fight sallies, Quarry talked of cutting Spencer "in two," while the latter said he might let Jerry stick around as long as the fourth round.

Each fighter will receive $125,000 for this bout and the winner is guaranteed $250,000 — as is Ellis — in the championship fight.

TWO ENGLISH TENNIS STARS MAY TURN PRO

LONDON (AP) — George MacCall, Los Angeles Tennis promoter, moved a step nearer Friday to bringing top women players into his pro troupe.

He contacted Britain's two leading women stars, Mrs. An Jones and Virginia Wade, and got a favorable response.

"I had long talks with both of them," MacCall said. "I didn't make a firm offer but both indicated they were interested."

Last week MacCall made offers to Mrs. Billie Jean King of Long Beach, the reigning Wimbledon queen, and Mrs. Margaret Smith Court of Australia.

He also reportedly is interested in Brazil's Maria Bueno.

'Men Friday' Upset Aztecs

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — Rumors spread rapidly here Friday night that Cal State Long Beach basketball coach Randy Sandefur is trying to reschedule his remaining CCAA games for Fridays.

The 49ers remained unbeaten in conference play on that night of the week by clipping defending champion San Diego State, 62-57.

"We were lucky," the unassuming Sandefur said after watching the 49ers regain a share of the CCAA lead, completing first-round conference competition with a 5-2 record, including a 4-0 mark on Friday.

Admittedly, the fact that San Diego shot 30 per cent from the field had something to do with the victory, but the credit for at least part of that should go to the 49er defense.

On offense the difference was Dick Nelson. The 49er forward was fantastic, making 12 of 18 floor shots on his way to a game-high 25 points. He also topped everyone in rebounds with 13.

An announcer on a San Diego radio station, interviewing Nelson after the game, commented that the 49er's performance was the best he had seen against the Aztecs this season.

Later, Nelson, who resembled a 225-pound well, said "I can't say if this was my best game of the year, but it certainly was the most satisfying."

vital victory for the team to stay in the race.

It didn't come easily, either. Long Beach trailed through most of the second half and didn't even catch up until a pair of free throws by Bob Stephens gave the 49ers a 53-tie with 4:47 remaining.

Fifty-five seconds later the biggest shot of the game was made by the littlest man on the court. Long Beach's 5-foot-9 Rick Mancabe dropped in a 26-footer to give the 49ers a 55-53 lead.

Nelson then padded the advantage with two muscle shots off passes from Stephens, who also scored off a great assist from Jim Greenfield and Long Beach led, 62-55, with 1:11 to go.

San Diego's efforts to rally were aborted by Nelson, who collected an important rebound and blocked a shot as the 49ers protected a five-point lead.

It was fortunate, too, because the 49ers were so excited about the possibility of beating San Diego that they missed three lead free throws in one-and-one situations in the final 29 seconds.

Sandefur was right. They were lucky... and good.

Boycott Outlasts Damascus

President Robert P. Strub declared the program cancelled for a second day because of an insufficiency of entries to present a nine-race card.

Horse owners did not enter either Thursday or Friday in a battle to gain higher purses from the track.

The horsemen were receiving 40 per cent of the purses. They sought 43 per cent over a three-year period — a one per cent increase each year. The track agreed to a 43 per cent increase, but the horsemen then hiked their demand to 47 per cent.

California tracks have paid horsemen 40 per cent of their pari-mutuel share the past 16 years. On Jan. 25, Santa Anita increased it to 41.

It was estimated that 1 per cent would be about $135,000 for the current meeting.

When negotiations reached a stalemate in mid-week, the horsemen met Wednesday night and decided not to enter their horses. This forced cancellation.

The dispute not only forced cancellation of what promised to be the biggest weekend attraction of the meeting, it also delayed the flow of about $360,000 in tax revenue into state coffers.

On an important racing Saturday, when the wagering reaches $4.5 million, California collects $360,000, or about seven per cent of the pari-mutuel handle, the same as the track receives.

Two similar boycotts have occurred during the past year at major tracks.

Aqueduct in New York was closed a week last April and Hialeah in Florida on its opening day this year, Jan. 17.

The New York Racing Assn., which operates all tracks, provided about $15,000 purse money daily for the remainder of the season to assure racing.

An agreement was reached in Florida under which the purse share was raised about 2 per cent to 45.

Vikings Rise to Occasion, Stun 'Gades

By DAVE DANIEL

Long Beach City College, showing more spirit in one game than it has all season, easily defeated Bakersfield College, 109-73, Saturday night before 2,123 fans.

The Vikings did little wrong and almost everything right in securing second place with L.A. Valley in the Metropolitan Conference and dropping Bakersfield into a tie for third.

Coach Chuck Kane saw the Vikings hit 63 per cent of their shots in moving them mostly to Zeller, who scored all 16 of his points in the opening half and added six assists.

Bakersfield coach Bill Nelson, in his first year, was obviously unhappy with his team from the beginning. When the starting five players scored only six points in the first six minutes, he yanked all five and replaced them with a group that didn't do much better.

In the freshman preliminary game, Harris' younger brother, Melvin scored 25 points as coach John Rambo's team dropped an 81-69 decision to UAW Local 148, a top-notch City League team.

their Metro record to 6-2 and avenging their first-round loss to the 'Gades in Bakersfield.

Six Vikings hit in double figures, as Shawn Johnson scored his average 23 points, but it was Tommie Lee Harris who won the hearts and applause of the fans.

Harris, who has waited two years to play for LBCC after redshirting last season and playing on the frosh the year before, scored 15 points—all in the second half on a seven-of-eight from the field effort and a free throw.

The output is a career high for the 6-2 forward. Prior to Friday night's game, he had taken only eight shots in the first five Metro games he played in this season.

Backing up Johnson and Harris were guards Gary Zeller and Sammy Washington with 16 and 10 points and forwards Rick Wilson and Jon Borchert with 15 and 10.

The Vikings scored the first four points of the night and never had to worry after that. Consistent shooting and good rebounding kept them on top throughout the first 20 minutes.

At halftime, the Vikings led by 20 points, 49-29.

game was made by the littlest man on the court. Long Beach's 5-foot-9 Rick Mancabe dropped in a 26-footer to give the 49ers a 55-53 lead.

Nelson then padded the advantage with two muscle shots off passes from Stephens, who also scored off a great assist from Jim Greenfield and Long Beach led, 62-55, with 1:11 to go.

San Diego's efforts to rally were aborted by Nelson, who collected an important rebound and blocked a shot as the 49ers protected a five-point lead.

It was fortunate, too, because the 49ers were so excited about the possibility of beating San Diego that they missed three lead free throws in one-and-one situations in the final 29 seconds.

Sandefur was right. They were lucky... and good.

Here Comes Arnie: Da Da Da Dat Da Daa, Charge!

By DAVE LEWIS
Staff Writer

PAIM SPRINGS—Arnold Palmer hitched up his pants and went to work Friday in the awe-inspiring manner which has made him the "idol of the fairways."

And when the day was over, Palmer had one of his famous charges rolling in high gear after hammering out a five-under-par 67 at Indian Wells to move into a tie with young Tom Wieskopf for the third-round lead in the Bob Hope Classic at 209, six under par.

It marks the first time this year that Palmer has been at the top of the pack... and he would have had the undisputed lead if his tee shot hadn't hit a marshal on the second hole and resulted in a bogey five.

Arnie had a fantastic round which easily could have been a 62 or 63 if he had been able to get his putting stroke working a little more consistently. He missed three birdie putts "three to four" feet... and rimmed the cup three other times from distances of 12 to 15 feet.

"If Arnie continues to play like this, he'll win the tournament by four or five strokes," said one tour veteran who was able to catch part of the round.

Meanwhile, Weiskopf, who came out of the pack with a 68 a year ago on the third round to take over the 54-hole lead in the Desert Classic, had another 68 Friday at Indian Wells to gain a share of first place.

Last year, Weiskopf went into a tailspin on the final two rounds and slid all the way down to a tie for 48th and last money of $138 when he shot a pair of 77's.

However, the long-driving Ohioian who is labeled as one of the "can't miss" prospects among the young players, is confident of hanging on better this time "if I can just get over the par-three holes from here on out."

He now has had five bogeys in his three rounds... all on par-three holes. Two on Friday's round enabled Palmer to catch him.

West Goes Like Young Man, Lakers Smash Sonics, 151-113

By DOUG IVES

There are those who feel that Jerry West, at age 29, has peaked, that the all-pro guard is on a downhill ride that can never be reversed.

It is a fact that West has become injury-prone the last two seasons, but in every other phase of the game the all-pro guard is as great as he was four or five years ago.

Who says so? The statistics do. And so do Bill van Breda Kolff and Fred Schaus. What's more, West himself thinks he is playing as well now as he ever has.

The Seattle Sonics were second only to Oscar Robertson among NBA guards.

When you consider that this figure is the highest in his eight-year career, and that his broken nose isn't fully mended, you then must put stock in West's own appraisal that he is not going downhill.

"I don't like to boast," says Jerry, "but I honestly feel my game is as sharp now as it ever was. I know in the last three weeks I've played better than any time in the last two years."

Van Breda Kolff, in his rookie season, claims, "It's hard to conceive him playing any better. With his bad luck lately, he has every right to be slipping, but he hasn't."

Mr. V lauded Jerry's defense more than his offense, saying, "He has great defensive knowledge of what the other team is going to do. He makes so many key steals it demoralizes the other club and gives us a big lift."

West's steals weren't pivotal against the Sonics, but two third-period baskets were, according to van Breda Kolff. Seattle trailed 72-54 at halftime, but six

Olympic Query: 'Is She or Isn't She?'

Combined News Services
GRENOBLE, France—Bunny Fields, a pert British Alpine skier, burst into loud laughter and said, "I think it's a ball, really. Personally, I can't wait to take the test."

"It's not funny for some," added Austria's striking Dikke Eger German in a somber note. "None of us would want to race against men."

The Alpine women skiers, among the most beautiful and feminine in the Winter Olympics, are both amused and chagrined by directives that they must be subjected to saliva tests to determine if they are really women.

"It seems a bit ridiculous, and a wasted effort in some ways," said Karen Budge of Jackson, Wyo., a slalom specialist.

It certainly is in Karen's case. She is a willowy blonde, 5-foot-8, with the figure of a Las Vegas showgirl.

Most of the girls here are happy that they look like girls and they're not mad at the Olympic Committee for perhaps doubting it.

The rumblings about Olympic sex started last summer when Poland's track star, Ewa Klobukowska, was disqualified from the European Cup track meet in Kiev on the basis of a chromosome count.

The tests were ordered by the medical commission of the International Olympic Committee at a meeting Jan. 26 in an effort to avoid masculine hermaphrodites from competing in female events.

Doctors Friday began testing the girls, going down a list and quietly selecting each fifth girl on the roster.

Officials who refused to be named said the system of random selection did nothing to solve the problem since it still left too many of the girls unchecked.

"They should test the most obvious or all of them," one official said, "but not go down the and pick them out of the blue. This makes a mockery of what these test are supposed to accomplish. It is ludicrous."

The announcement that the test would be made was widely reported to have triggered the Soviet Union to leave triple gold medal winner Claudia Boyarskikh behind.

Bulgarian champion, Krastana Stoewa, who last year tied for first place with Boyarskikh at the pre-Olympics at Autrans, also was left behind because of the tests.

Austria's reigning world downhill champion, Erika Schnegger, quit the national team this season "for personal reasons." It was widely reported that the reasons had to do with uncertainty about being able to pass a sex test.

The test which is being administered is a buccal test, which involves the scraping of the tissue on the inside of the mouth. The tissue is then analyzed to determine the number of chromosomes. Men and women have 22 identical chromosomes. If a 23 male chromosome is found in the test that person will be disqualified.

The British girls brought along certificates from their doctors attesting to their femininity. It won't be enough for the Olympic committee.

"We find it all terribly amusing," said Divina Galica, captain of the British team. "We aren't worried."

GB Boss Can't Pspell Name

Combined News Services

GREEN BAY — The new coach of the Green Bay Packers is such a celebrity that people don't even know how to spell his name.

Some spell it Bengston; others take the easy way out and spell it Bengson. The right way is B-e-n-g-t-s-o-n.

Nobody has much trouble with the first name. It's Phil.

More often than not, Phil's name has been spelled B-e-n-g-s-t-o-n. Even the Packer press book, the football guide and perhaps National Football League records spell it wrong.

Bengtson explains that the progenitor of his Swedish family was named Bengt, and his descendants called themselves Bengtson.

The 54-year-old Bengtson was named Thursday night as Vince Lombardi's hand-picked successor as head coach of the Packers.

While Lombardi will still be the No. 1 man in the front office, he made it clear Bengtson would be the No. 1 man on the football field.

"All quotes concerning the team from now on will come from Bengtson," Lombardi said. "All quotes concerning management will come from me."

Bengtson said he didn't expect any interference from Lombardi.

"Our relationship has been very close. I'm certain there will be no interference. I'm sure Vince will have his hands full with his job as general manager."

Lombardi, as general manager, acts as owner of the community-owned, non-profit Packers. He makes decisions, guided by a board of directors, an owner would make with any other team.

The new coach acknowledged that Lombardi's standards of discipline were no small factor in the capture of five championships in nine seasons.

"I fully understand those standards," he said, "and I fully intend to continue with that kind of a program."

But, Bengtson said, "My approach to putting the points across may be a little bit different."

U.S. Bobsledders Sparkle in Tuneup

Combined News Services

GRENOBLE, France — An American bobsled piloted by Navy Lieutenant Paul Lamey Friday braved a driving snow storm to post the top clocking in time trials on the Olympic run.

Lamey of Manchester, N.H., and his brakemen, Navy ADR 2 Robert Huscher, of Keeseville, N.Y., sped down the 1,500-meter ice chute in one minute 12.65 seconds to heat a field which included multi-world champion Eugenio Monti of Italy and Olympic champion Tony Nash of Britain.

Elsewhere, conditions were so good that the skiers wished this was racing day.

"It's great," said America's Billy Kidd.

"Very good," said Austria's Gerhard Nennig and "excellent" France's Jean Claude Killy commented.

On the ladies downhill track, the verdict was similar.

The start for both men and women is the same at the Croix de Chamrousse but then the girls flash down to Le Recoign while the men's trail plunges over two steep walls to Casserousse.

It was at the second of these walls that the first tumbles occurred. Two Turks took the more spectacular falls, but were unhurt.

"Are you out of your minds?" their coach admonished them. "This is your first day on the downhill trail and you go down as if you want to break a record."

In other training, a tangle of Finnish and Russian cross-country skiers led to a mixup. Twelve Finns taking part in a 20-kilometer proving race ran across the tracks of the Russians who were undergoing a similar test.

The result was a disaster. Most of the Finns took off on the Soviet tracks and only four of them finished the race they were in. The rest got lost and finally turned up back at the Olympic Village hours later.

Porsches Threat at Daytona?

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Fords own the pole positions, but the favorite's role rests with four new Porsches today in the grueling 24 hours of Daytona Auto Race.

One of the 2.2 liter Porsche 907's—first over two-liter cars ever built by the famous Stuttgart factory — is expected to be front Sunday at 3 p.m. when the race ends.

A Ford GT40, driven by Jackie Ickx of Belgium and Brian Redman of England, set a qualifying record of 179.37 miles per hour Friday to take the inside front position for the starting flag. Right behind at 117.2 mph was another GT40 piloted by Paul Hawkins and David Hobbs.

But almost leisurely, the ghost-white Porsches took the 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th starting positions with speeds ranging from 116.92 to 114.14 m.p.h.

The much-publicized Howmet turbine car, which whooshes around the track almost silently compared to the screaming European cars, qualified in 6th place with a speed of 112.33 m.p.h.

Veteran trainer Jack Skirvin made history at Hialeah Park Friday when he saddled three consecutive winners.

It was established that no trainer ever before had won three in a row at Hialeah.

Dr. James G. Catlett, who had been a steward at the track since 1932, could not recall any trainer ever winning three races in one day, much less three in a row. Hialeah opened in 1925.

Skirvin sent out Darien Fats, $4.20, to win the third race; won the fourth with Water Boy, $11.40, and then took the fifth with Best In Show, $40.20.

Skirvin used a different rider on each horse — Angel Cordero Jr., Bob Ussery and Heliodoro Gustines, in that order.

In Reality, which has been out of the money only once in 20 races, headed a field of 13 named Friday for the 33rd running of the Seminole Handicap at Hialeah Park today.

The son of Intentionally, winner of the 1962 Seminole, will carry high weight of 121 pounds in the final major tuneup for the $100,000 Widener Handicap here Feb. 17. In Reality,

Ronnie Baldwin booted longshot Sir Gaelic across the finish line a length in front of Prince Reaper in the feature at the New Orleans Fair Grounds.

Sir Gaelic raced the six furlongs in 1:13 flat and paid $31.60, $16 and $11.

Silly Squaw, ridden by Tony Garamone, won the feature eighth race Friday at Pimlico. The victor ran the six furlongs in 1:13 4-5 and paid $31, $12.60 and $6.

International 6 Missionaries Slain by Reds

NEW YORK — Six American missionaries, spreading the word of their faith in the dangerous Vietnam countryside, were reported slain Friday in a Viet Cong onslaught through the highlands village of Ban Me Thuot. A 33-year-old nurse was reported missing and another missionary captured. The wife of one of the slain men was injured. The bodies of five of the slain missionaries — three men and two women — were reported left in the village area by the Viet Cong — with booby traps attached to them. The sixth, a daughter of one of the victims, died later. They are identified as the Rev. Robert Ziemer, 49, of Toledo, Ohio; Miss Ruth M. Wilting, 42, of Cleveland, a nurse; the Rev. C. Edward Thompson, 43, and his wife, Ruth, 44, of New Kensington, Pa.; and Leon C. Griswold, 66, of White Plains, N.Y. Mrs. Ziemer, who was injured, told the Christian and Missionary Alliance in New York by radio telephone later that Griswold's daughter, Carolyn, 41, also a missionary, had died of injuries. Miss Betty Olsen, the 33-year-old nurse, was thought to have fled into the woods around Ban Me Thuot, according to the Alliance. Hank Blood of the Waycliffe Bible Translators was captured.

Cambodia Threatened PHNOM PENH — Prince Norodom Sihanouk charged Friday that Vietnamese communists were supplying weapons to inhabitants of Cambodian border areas, urging them to break away from Cambodia and form an independent state. He warned that all Communist "traitors" would be shot. The Cambodian chief of state spoke as officials disclosed that the Communist insurgency against Sihanouk's neutral regime, previously limited to the northwest of the country, had spread to the northeastern province of Rattanakiri, bordering on Vietnam.

UN Mission to End UNITED NATIONS — The United Nations announced Friday that the peace mission of Swedish diplomat Herbert De Ribbing to ease tensions between Cambodia and Thailand would be terminated because of Cambodia's refusal to permit it to continue. A spokesman for Secretary-General U Thant said Thant had notified the two governments Wednesday that the De Ribbing mission would end Feb. 15, 18 months after it began.

More Quakes in Palermo PALERMO, Sicily — Two small earthquakes trembled across western Sicily Friday, bringing to 86 the number of tremors recorded in the Mediterranean island in the past 20 days. Friday's tremors were comparatively light, although they quickened fear among Sicilians still trying to dig out from earlier quakes. At least 250 persons have been killed in the series of quakes which began Jan. 14.

Plane Misses Houses TORONTO — A twin-engine plane reported to be a naval sub-chaser crashed between two houses in northern Metropolitan Toronto Friday night. First reports were that four bodies, believed to be from the plane's crew, were picked up at the scene.

No More Aussies to Viet SYDNEY, Australia — Australia will make no further increase in its military commitment in South Vietnam, Prime Minister John Gorton said Friday. Speaking at a press briefing in Canberra, he said that "as far as I am concerned it's a permanent statement."

Police, Students Battle MADRID — Spanish riot police attacked hundreds of medical students Friday at the door to the Madrid University hospital after an "indefinite" strike was voted in the medicine faculty. Helmeted police afoot and on horseback charged the students after they left the hospital despite guarantees that they would not be molested at the end of their meeting. Despite numerous new arrests and an order that the 9,000 students in the political and economic sciences faculty would have to pay extra tuition and pledge themselves in writing to behave peacefully, new antigovernment manifestations were known to be planned by the students.

Slav Statesman Dies ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — Dr. Ivan Ribar, president of Yugoslavia's war time parliament and of the postwar parliament's presidium, died here Friday after a brief illness. The politician and statesman was 87.

Russ Get British Appeal BIRMINGHAM, England — Foreign Secretary George Brown urged Friday night that the Soviet Union join Britain in an immediate appeal for an end to the fighting in Vietnam.

National Rule Red Group Gets Equal Time

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission ruled Friday that a radio station that editorially attacked the W.E.B. DuBois clubs as being "controlled by American Communists" must, under the fairness doctrine, give the group radio time to answer. The DuBois clubs have been identified both by the FBI and the Department of Justice as being Communist fronts under the fairness doctrine broadcasters are obligated to present all sides of controversial issues.

The DuBois Clubs case centered around an editorial broadcast over WHN, New York City, which described the organization as Marxist, red, "controlled by American Communists," and "foremost among the activities currently directed against our young people." Storer Broadcasting Co Inc., owner of the station, said the announcement was factual in nature and was based upon official government source material.

But the FCC, in a four-page letter to Storer, said "the truth or falsity of the attack is not a matter for determination by this commission."

Coal Mine Strike Spreads PITTSBURGH — A wildcat strike of coal miners, originally a protest against Pennsylvania state police, grew Friday to a massive shutdown that has cut off most of the soft coal production in the country. An industry spokesman said all mines of any size in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee and eastern Kentucky were closed. No official figures were available but apparently as many as 78,000 miners could be idle, and there was no firm indication when they would go back to the pits.

New Diet Pill Ban Looms WASHINGTON — The government told Congress Friday it was ready to ban the manufacture and sale of diet pills that contain the combination of the drugs thyroid and digitalis which have been widely used for 30 years.

Food and Drug Commissioner Goddard said digitalis was an established prescription drug of heart cases and that thyroid was an effective product for glandular disorders. But he said a combination of the two was "irrational as well as dangerous."

Warning on Discrimination WASHINGTON — The Labor Department is warning firms with federal contracts that they had better eliminate religious discrimination in employment or face the loss of their government business. The warning is in a memorandum from the secretary of Labor to the heads of all federal agencies involved in contracting with industry. The memo warns that "although government contractors have made progress in affording employment opportunities without regard to religion, there remain industries and companies in which some religious groups, notably Jews, and to some extent Catholics, are still excluded from positions at certain levels of responsibility."

The American Jewish Committee, which was one of the groups said to have complained, feels that in some cases large defense contractors have been discriminating against Catholics and Jews, especially in executive level jobs.

Rain, Snow Storm Front SAN FRANCISCO — A mild storm front moved into Northern California Friday, bringing snow to the mountains and a light, but steady rain to the lower elevations. The U.S. Weather Bureau said the storm would become more intense today, particularly in the north.

Charges Huge Auto 'Safety' Profits

WASHINGTON — Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., accused automobile manufacturers Friday of establishing prices which he said will produce a $100 million profit on the installation of shoulder harnesses. Mondale urged that Congress require disclosure of the actual expense involved in installing safety features. Mondale told a Senate government operations subcommittee that shoulder harnesses for drivers were blamed for price increases averaging $25 a car, but actually are so inexpensive they could have been installed at no price increase. Mondale said he determined that the harnesses are sold to domestic automobile makers for $1.25 to $1.50 each. He said a European producer advised him that harnesses, fittings and anchorages for combination lap and shoulder seat belts cost $2.50 apiece. "Thus industry will be making a profit of about $20 a car, for an overall profit on this one standard alone of more than $100 million," Mondale said.

Later a federal purchasing official said major automobile manufacturers might give up sales to the government rather than detail specific costs of safety equipment in their bids. Heinz A. Aberfeller, commissioner of the Federal Supply Service, said any such development would seriously impair law enforcement, mail deliveries, internal security and U.S. activities overseas.

SON CHILLY

The father of an American Navy deserter arrived in Stockholm Friday "for a long and thorough talk with my son," but the boy gave him a chilly reception at the airport. Charles Lindner and his wife, employees at a Tobyhanna, Pa., Army depot, found their son Michael, 19, waiting but saying little. The youth was one of four U.S. sailors who made a dramatic escape from the American carrier Intrepid in a Japanese port Oct. 23. After going to the Soviet Union to denounce U.S. involvement in Vietnam, they arrived in Stockholm Dec. 29 and received permission to stay. Young Lindner let his mother hold his hand, but hardly spoke to either parent.

DIAL-A-VOTE

Sen. Russell B. Long proposes a dial-a-vote system to speed decision making in the Senate. "I'm just quietly trying to do a little behind the scenes work," the Louisiana Democrat said, "trying to get them to wake up to the fact that the telephone exists." His objective: A system which would permit senators who are away from the floor to vote by telephone on bills and have their votes counted. He suggested the Senate secretary could handle the telephone balloting. Long said in an interview in Washington that the Senate wastes the equivalent of 200 days a year delaying votes to accommodate absent members or waiting for people to show up for roll calls.

'SHOOT TO KILL'

Hillsborough County State Atty. Paul Antinori Jr., Friday advised law enforcement men in Tampa, Fla., to "shoot to kill" and use dogs and shotguns to combat a wave of armed robberies involving assaults. Antinori also said he will ask courts to sentence persons convicted of armed robberies in which victims were assaulted to life imprisonment, the maximum sentence. The state attorney called a news conference to announce what he called a "hard nose policy." It followed by several weeks Miami Police Chief Walter Headley's announcement that his men would use dogs and carry shotguns to combat crime. Said Antinori, "Our office has been aware of several recent armed robberies in Tampa accompanied by violence to victims, including the pistol-whipping of helpless, innocent women." He said the situation calls for "the use of ultimate force" to bring it to a halt.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS Diapers for 2+2

Mrs. Virginia Schroer announced Friday with tentative firmness that she doesn't want any more children for a few years. The pert 19-year-old has given birth to two sets of twins in the past 10 months. "We didn't think it was possible," she said, glancing at 9 day-old Amy and Angela asleep in their crib. "We'll wait a few years before we have any more."

Across the living room, her husband, Tom, 20, shared his hamburger with 10-month-old Nick and Nowell. "I've got twin sisters in my family," Tom offered, "but that's all I know of. And there aren't any twins at all in my family," said his wife. "We just can't believe it." The girls were born Jan. 24, exactly 10 months after the boys. "I was a little surprised when we found out it was twins again," Tom admitted.

"A little!" exclaimed Virginia. "He was surprised enough that he forgot to eat dinner that day."

INFANT SUED

A New York City woman asked State Supreme Court Friday to split three ways a $100,000 state lottery prize won by her 14-month-old son. The woman, Mrs. Barbara Mizrahi, and another son, Marco David, 5, filed suit in State Supreme Court against the infant, Frederick Maurice. According to court papers, David Mizrahi, an accountant, bought three lottery tickets each month—one for his wife, and one for each of his two sons. It was his intention, the paper said, that if any ticket was selected, the three would share the prize equally, and Mrs. Mizrahi asked the court to divide the money that way. Young Frederick won the October prize, and since state regulations require that the money be paid to the person whose name appears on the winning ticket, the check was in his name.

ON WAY TO JAIL

Charles (Batts) Battaglia surrendered to a U.S. marshal in Tucson Friday to begin serving a 10-year sentence for extortion. He was convicted of forcing a bowling alley operator to remove a coin operated pool table and install one from a company with which he was associated. He was also fined $10,000. Battaglia's attorneys have until Feb. 16 to ask for a rehearing of the U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding his conviction.

LBJ PARTY

President and Mrs. Johnson have sent out invitations to a mammoth reception for all members of Congress and wives on Feb. 20, the White House said. The lawmakers will be given a 7 p.m. black tie reception by the Johnsons.

ROYAL WEDDING

Before European kings and princes, Princess Benedikte of Denmark weds a German prince today in a marriage ceremony that will be as low key as her position allows. Only 200 guests have been invited to the wedding of the princess, 23, who is second in line to the Danish throne, to Prince Richard of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg, 32. King Frederik IX will be giving the last of his three daughters in marriage, Princess Margarethe, 27, heir to the throne, was married last June to a former French diplomat, who is now Prince Henrik of Denmark. The king's youngest daughter, 21-year-old Anne Marie, was married to King Constantine of Greece in Athens in 1964.

Anne-Marie and Constantine, now in exile in Rome since he failed in an attempt to overthrow the Greek military regime, will attend. Other royalty on hand are King Gustav VI, Adolf of Sweden, King Olav V of Norway, Queen Elizabeth, Britain's queen mother, Crown Prince Harald of Norway, Crown Prince Carl Gustav of Sweden, and Crown Princess Beatrix of the Netherlands. The wedding will take place in the family chapel at the royal Fredensborg Castle north of Copenhagen in accordance with the wishes of the shy princess.

Times' story of a five-man gang.

"There's the two men," he said. "Then you might count their wives. That still leaves us one short. Maybe the Times knows something we don't know. If they do, I'd sure like to hear it. In fact, I'd like to know where they found out about the hoax aspect. I'm sure—reasonably sure—no one in my office leaked the story."

(Thursday, Harris denied that his office had branded the witnesses' story a hoax.)

The other principal in the investigation — Orange County District Attorney Hicks — was either "out of his office for the afternoon" or in San Francisco for the past two days, and unavailable for comment.

MRS. HICKS SAID her husband flew to San Francisco, where Harris maintains his office Thursday.

Kirschke called Harris' press release prejudicial.

"He has absolutely precluded—made it impossible no matter what happens now—for me to have a fair trial," said the 46-year-old former Naples resident. He accused Harris of "trying the case in the newspaper."

Kirschke said Harris' press blurb was "in violation of the Constitution, improper and highly prejudicial to my rights, and ultimately the federal courts will not allow it to stand."

RAMSEY SAID Harris, in possession of the information on the two witnesses for several weeks, should have given the information to the defense instead of hiding the two men from Kirschke.

"Under the circumstances," said Ramsey, "where a man's life is at stake, the procedure should have been to notify us of the identity and let us pick it up from there."

Both Kirschke and Ramsey said they couldn't be sure the two men with whom Harris' agents had been talking were the same pair who told Ramsey in September of their presence near the Kirschke home on the night Elaine Terry Kirschke, 43, and Orville William Drankhan, 41, were shot to death.

KIRSCHKE SAID HE wouldn't "assume they were the same men" and Ramsey said he had not been called to identify the pair.

Ramsey also revealed that Kirschke has twice written letters to Harris—Jan. 23 and again Jan. 24—urging him to refrain from indulging in speculation in the press.

Friday, after Harris delivered his "hoax" statement, Kirschke was transparently angered.

"How can you try these matters in the press," he asked reporters gathered at Los Angeles County Jail, "and then have a fair and impartial trial before the tribunal?"

Harris, who heard about Kirschke's verbal blast by telephone, reacted in kind.

Kirschke Jury Hit By Ramsey

Albert C. S. Ramsey, former attorney for condemned double slayer Jack Kirschke, has issued a new and bitter condemnation of the jury that convicted his client.

Ramsey's denunciations of the panel that ordered the former deputy district attorney to die have been routine since the jury handed down its decisions Dec. 19 and Jan. 10.

BUT Ramsey's latest attack did have one thing that set it apart — it came in an address to 114 California State College at Long Beach City College law students assembled for an end-of-semester dinner at the Golden Sails Inn. The dinner, arranged by students Sue Brunswick, Michael Durand and Barbara Wrighton, proved a bombshell.

Ramsey chronicled a lengthy list of conflicts and inconsistencies within the case itself, lashing Long Beach Police Department investigators, the California attorney general's office, judicial decisions by Superior Court Judge Kathleen Parker and other targets.

BUT THE attorney, a 30-year veteran of courtroom action, saved his most acid comments for the 12 men and women who composed the Kirschke jury.

"It was," he told the students and Dr. Maurice Mason, their professor, "a very, very bad jury."

A PROUD DAY FOR GENERAL JIMMY AND HIS WIFE

James Stewart pins the gold bars of a Marine second lieutenant on the epaulets of his stepson, Ronald McLean, while Ronald's mother, Mrs. Gloria Stewart, gives the newly commissioned officer a good luck kiss. Commissioning took place at Quantico Marine Base in Virginia. Stewart, better known for his many heroic motion picture roles, was a bomber pilot in World War II and is an Air Force Reserve brigadier general.

'SCIENCE FICTION TABULATIONS'

By JIM MCCAULEY
From Our L. A. Bureau

Public opinion polls and political odds-makers were roasted Friday by four of California's top public figures.

In a panel before a California Newspaper Publishers Association convention, Mayor Samuel W. Yorty of Los Angeles charged that some publishers use "slanted polls" on the upcoming U. S. Senate race.

THE POLLS are being interpreted to convince Californians that incumbent Sen. Thomas Kuchel cannot be successfully challenged, Yorty declared.

One of the possible Kuchel challengers, Dr. Max Rafferty, was sitting at the panel table.

"I regard polls as science fiction," chimed in Rafferty, state superintendent of public instruction.

He declared that if polls accurately could forecast elections that Thomas Dewey would be president, Glenn Anderson, lieutenant governor; Alan Cranston, state controller, and Ralph Richardson, state superintendent of public instruction, pickup stars.

GOP ASSEMBLY Minority Leader Robert T. Monagan, R-Tracy, said a danger exists that too many persons will follow the lead of polls rather than their exerting their influence on the polls.

Monagan also expressed fears that pollster questions may not be penetrating enough to obtain meaningful results. He said he doubts if any poll on withholding state income tax has probed whether public opinion favors withholding if it means paying taxes twice in the same calendar year. The issue of forgiveness for one calendar year or part of a year is a key point of legislative debate, Monagan pointed out.

Ex-Gov. Edmund G. Brown recalled how he financially beat the 5-to-1 betting odds against him when he was elected district attorney in San Francisco.

Brown confided that he took a $100 contribution and bet it on himself. Several of his friends also wagered on the 5-to-1 odds.

"IT WAS the only campaign before or since in which I didn't have a campaign deficit," said Brown.

The ex-governor stated: "All this is illegal... but the statute of limitations is up."

Brown also said polls "almost are too accurate at times." They properly caught the trends in his gubernatorial victories over William Knowland and Richard Nixon.

"They had a very discouraging effect on us in 1958. We slipped behind in March. By October we

More Passports Sought Despite I.B.J.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The U.S. District Court in Portland says applications for passports have increased since President Johnson warned against foreign travel.

Reagan Denies Friction

Gov. Edmund G. Brown had a 100 per cent turnover in his appointees during his first year of office, Gov. Ronald Reagan said Friday in reply to critics who pointed to resignation of Finance Chief Gordon P. Smith as evidence of "controversy" in his regime.

"Past governors have had their troubles in losing good men too," Reagan said in a plane-side news conference shortly after arriving at Los Angeles International Airport.

The governor was in Los Angeles for his annual State of California Address, delivered to the California Newspapers Publishers Association convention at the Century Plaza hotel.

About 50 striking employees of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner picketed the hotel.

Minuteman Fails Launch Effort

VANDENBERG AFB (UPI) — A Minuteman II intercontinental ballistic missile failed Friday shortly after it was launched from its silo toward a pre-selected target 5,000 miles across the Pacific Ocean.

Cause of the failure was not determined, the Air Force said.

The launch at 2:17 a.m. PST was conducted by Strategic Air Command missile combat crews from the 394th Strategic Missile Squadron here.

"Inadequate training at menial tasks is not an attractive alternative to crime," she said.

This lack of training, combined with delays in court procedure that often deprive suspects of freedom and rehabilitation, leads many convicts to return to society "more bitter and antisocial than when they went in," the second Coro team concluded.

Industry Initiative in Ghettos

'Only Hope for Urban U.S.' Reagan

By DAVID SHAW

Only a massive and immediate effort by private industry can alleviate oppressive conditions in urban ghettos before the residents of those ghettos destroy urban America.

That was the conclusion Friday of five prominent 1967 college graduates serving nine-month internships in public affairs for the nonprofit, privately financed Coro Foundation of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

THE INTERNS — midway through their training for leadership in business, labor and government — termed today's urban crisis "a greater threat to national security and collective existence than the Civil War or Hitler's Germany."

Among their recommendations for nongovernmental responses to this threat were:

—Less restrictive regulations by financial institutions in lending money for building and rehabilitating low-cost housing.

—Rent supplements for low-cost housings.

—Hiring unemployed Negroes to work on housing construction in their own communities.

—Business-managed and subsidized job-training programs that, interwoven with academic instruction, would have the effect of paying potential dropouts to remain in school and simultaneously develop usable job skills.

—Recruit minority group employees by setting up tables and conducting interviews in the ghetto — on street corners and in service stations, if necessary — rather than through newspaper classified ads most of them never see and in State Department of Employment interviews that confuse and frighten many of them.

The interns making these recommendations — Jane Blake of UCLA, Robin Flint of Middlebury College, John Greenwood of the University of California at Riverside, Erich Larisch of the University of Washington and Eugene Siskel of Yale — warned that it is "futile" to postpone these programs by citing the progress Negroes have made in the past 30 years.

"As long as the infant mortality rate remains 30 times greater among Negroes than whites, and as long as we spend more on the war in Vietnam in one month than we spend in the war on poverty in one year, we cannot be content," Siskel said.

"Our cities are burning, and more of us better start smelling the smoke."

THE CORO team made its recommendations to an audience of 60 persons, including representatives of city, state and national government and business, labor and human relations experts.

A second Coro team — Richard Beserra of the University of California at Berkeley, Steven Burnett of Iowa State, Stephen Frantz of Harvard, Barbara Shaw of Stanford and Quentin Spector of Harvard — made a report to the audience on causes of and solutions to the rising crime rate.

Both Spector and Miss Shaw hammered away at the "falacious reasoning" that — in Spector's words — "putting more muscle in the arm of the law" is the best deterrent to crime.

He called this "buck-passing" and lamented America's "undue reliance on the effectiveness of legalistic deterrents to crime."

"THE PUBLIC must protect itself by avoiding carelessness and neglect in the protection of itself and its belongings," he said, citing Los Angeles Police Department statistics showing 25,000 stolen cars last year — 20,000 of them left unlocked and 15,000 with the keys left inside.

Perhaps, Spector suggested, insurance policies could be "tailored so that the company's liability and the victim's claim would be in direct proportion to his carelessness at self-protection."

Miss Shaw, who investigated penal procedures and correctional institutions, blamed inadequate job-training programs in these institutions for the high rate of repeat-offenders. Most vocational education programs in prisons are "geared more to reducing the expense of prison operations than to training the inmates to lead productive lives after their release."

"Inadequate training at menial tasks is not an attractive alternative to crime," she said.

Big Saturn En Route to Florida

An eight-story Saturn second-stage rocket segment destined to loft a manned Apollo mission next year began its long journey into orbit from Seal Beach Friday.

The S-II stage, fifth flight model delivered by North American Rockwell's Space Division, was loaded aboard the USNS Pt. Barrow for a 15-day trip through the Panama Canal to National Aeronautics and Space Administration test facilities near New Orleans.

After static test firing of its five J-2 rocket engines, the booster will be transported to Kennedy Space Center to be mated with other segments of the 365-foot high Saturn V-Apollo for one of the final manned lunar mission orbital tests in 1969.

being beaten with unprecipitated losses.

A BATTALION of South Vietnamese Rangers was reported moved into Saigon to reinforce security units.

The U.S. Command reported heavy contact with the Viet Cong about daybreak Saturday in the Gia Dinh area on the northern edge of Saigon. It said the enemy was blocked by a South Vietnamese force on the northeast and a U.S. force on the southwest.

The Viet Cong were said to be trying to escape past the South Vietnamese troops, some of them in small boats on the Saigon River.

In the Chinese Cholon section of the capital, fighting broke out in front of a children's hospital. Cholon was hit by six Viet Cong mortar shells during the night.

At Hue, a main gate of the Citadel was reported wrested from Communist control. The U.S. Command said the enemy withdrew into the northern part of the old walled areas under repeated strafing and rocket raids by allied fighter-bombers.

Among the targets of the allied planes were anti-aircraft guns the Communists had mounted on the towers of the Citadel's outer wall.

Earlier, the U.S. Command had reported that the enemy was holding on to two corners of the Citadel.

The allies reported killing more than 300 of the enemy in bitter fighting at Hue Friday.

ONE ILLUSTRATION of the tremendous property damage the Communist offensive has caused was a report from President Johnson on the toll of aircraft at American fields across Vietnam. He said 15 planes and 23 helicopters were destroyed, and about 100 other planes so severely damaged they would have to be replaced.

At the resort city of Dalat, 140 miles northeast of Saigon, enemy machine-gun fire hit U.S. installations, the railroad station and a South Vietnamese army post.

At Xuan Loc, a provincial capital 38 miles east of Saigon, Communist troops swarmed in from two sides and hit at every allied compound in the city. American planes strafed the attackers.

More than 500 enemy raiders attacked allied positions in Ben Tre city, a provincial capital in the Mekong Delta. U.S. headquarters said the attack was repulsed after 5½ hours.

IN CAN THO, another provincial capital and the largest city in the delta south of Saigon, mortar rounds set several fires in the U.S. Special Forces compound near the airfield. Communist forces also stormed into Mo Cay, a district town in the delta.

DOESN'T FILE FOR JUNE PRIMARY Shirley Temple Says 'No'

WOODSIDE (UPI) — Shirley Temple Black Friday decided against an attempt for Congress in the June primary election. The former child movie star lost in her first political bid for office in a special 11th Congressional District election last fall to succeed the late Republican J. Arthur Younger.

Attorney Paul McCloskey, a Korean war hero, captured the Republican nomination by an 20,000-vote margin over Shirley and went on to defeat Democrat Roy M. Archibald in a runoff election.

"We should continue his (McCloskey's) trial for one full term..." said Shirley, now 39 and married to wealthy businessman Charles A. Black.

Since her loss to McCloskey last November, Shirley has worked actively with the Republican National Committee in a series of national speaking engagements. Last week, she joined New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon in an appearance before the National Republican Women's Club in New York City.

Plastic Pipe Eyed for Water L.A. 'Tax Break' Fantastic Deal

Rep. Edward Reinecke, R-Los Angeles, said he has obtained a promise from the Bureau of Reclamation that by December 1970 it would submit results of a reconnaissance study to determine the feasibility of constructing an undersea plastic pipeline to bring fresh water from Northern California rivers to Southern California.

The congressman made the announcement Friday at the University of Southern California.

Reinecke said there was another plan of the bureau "which I can't buy."

"The plan was to install a desalinization plant on the Marine Corps Base at Camp Pendleton, then build an aqueduct to pump fresh water into Lake Mead to reduce the salinity of the Colorado River," the congressman said.

Los Angeles city taxpayers have been paying only one-fourteenth the regular county rate for county assessment and tax-collection service — while taxpayers in other cities have been paying the county their full share.

The cut-rate county deal for Los Angeles, covering almost a half-century, was made public Friday in a letter to County Supervisors. Lindon S. Hollinger, chief administrative officer, following up on a board order to review existing assessment-collection fees, recommended that the Los Angeles fees be upgraded to the same maximum rate paid by every other municipality that contracts for county assessment-collection services.

(Long Beach provides its own assessment and municipal tax-collection services).

The Hollinger letter estimated Los Angeles is now slipping by with a fee pegged at 6.75 per cent of the going rate.

The 1967 grand jury had asked the county to look into assessment and tax-collection fees. But there was no public report that Los Angeles had been handed a cut rate.

Arraigned in Slaying

Handyman Horace Odell Bell was arraigned in Los Angeles Superior Court Friday for the grisly murder of a 6-year-old Bell Gardens boy who lived next door to him.

The 48-year-old defendant, formerly of 5954 Ludell St., was arrested in January in Wichita Falls, Tex., for violation of probation.

He had been arrested in 1965 on suspicion of child molesting, but pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of committing an act against public peace, health and decency and was placed on three years' probation.

Bell is accused of killing little Edward E. Gleason, of 5958 1/2 Ludell St., whose body was found July 13 crumpled into an electrical meter box near the Firestone Boulevard overcrossing of the Long Beach Freeway.

The decomposed body was clad only in undershorts.

Bell, who will return to Superior Court Feb. 8 to enter his plea on the murder charge, became a prime suspect on the basis of suspicious remarks he made about the handsome little boy, according to Lt. Norm Hamilton of the sheriff's homicide detail.

There was also physical evidence Hamilton would not reveal.

Bell told investigators he took a bicycle trip to Texas where he has relatives, after the June 20 disappearance of the Gleason boy. Bell waived extradition so he could be returned to face charges.

Chancellor Dumke Warns Against Campus Violence, Supports Dissent

MONTEREY (UPI) — The chancellor of California's state colleges said Friday campus violence is unwarranted "in a nation which has such carefully structured constitutional safeguards for liberty."

Glenn S. Sumke discussed student dissent at the final session of the three-day far west meeting of the American College Public Relations Association.

"Dissent in itself is not new," he said, "but the form it is now taking is something we cannot stand."

Dumke said it is one thing to toss a Molotov cocktail at a henchman of the Nazi party in pre-World War II days, "but it is quite another to threaten or use violence in America which has a legal system carefully structured to permit itself to be changed by legal means when the occasion warrants."

He urged the 150 representatives from 70 colleges in Arizona, California, Nevada and Hawaii to keep their schools from going "Latin."

The chancellor noted some universities south of the border have lost their

APPEARING at a panel discussion on the future of higher education in California were George C. S. Benson, president of Claremont Men's College; the Rev. Charles W. Dullea, president of the University of San Francisco; Dr. Robert J. Wert, president of Mills College; and Robert D. Clark, president of San Jose State College.

Benson, who also is a member of the State Coordinating Council for Higher Education, noted there were nine institutions in California offering Doctor of Philosophy degrees. He said state colleges should concentrate on becoming great teaching institutions and should not be thinking of becoming Ph.D. producers.

WEST said higher education will require elimination of required courses in the future and tailoring the four-year curriculum to the needs and desires of individual students.

"This will mean greater emphasis on counseling, fewer lecture courses and more discussion seminars," Wert said.

Father Dullea said the principal contribution a university can make is to instill in students a "real consciousness" of the inequitable distribution of material wealth in the world as a first step to correcting this social problem.

Clark, noting that California has less than 10 per cent of the scholarship funds available in New York State, said public colleges have too few resources to do the job that has to be done of involving them in the problems of the community.

Gardening

By JOE LITTLEFIELD
Garden Consultant

There are many potential movie stars among the actors and actresses, but unfortunately there's only "limited room at the top of the ladder." This condition may be compared to the All America Rose Selections Award Winning Roses that are selected annually on their over-all growing performances at the official rose-testing gardens throughout the United States.

Sometimes rose breeders are in a quandary when they have to decide which ones should be sent to the official rose trials gardens. At times some of the overlooked ones prove to be very good.

ONE of the newer of a number of introduction roses that has a delightful combination of colors — they reflect the same auroral shades one sees when the sun breaks over the Sierras — is Rose Sierra Dawn, a hybrid tea originated by Dr. David I. Armstrong who crossed Helen Traubel and Manitou.

The bright yellow at the base of each petal covers about half of the reverse side, enhancing the coral and salmon tones which predominate. The lovely blossoms provide sweet rose fragrance, seemingly regardless of weather or time of day. The medium-size bush branches freely, which means a plentiful supply of colorful, sweet-scented blossoms.

Ask your nurseryman about other desirable newer introduction roses.

Late rose pruning usually is done by the first third of February, excepting in the colder sectors of Southern California. It is usually optional whether the gardener strips off the remaining old leaves after pruning.

However, if the rose foliage was rust-infested, then the gardener must strip off all the leafage and gather up all the foliage on the ground. This is done to avoid scattering more dormant rust fungus spores that activate and grow during the humid warm weather later.

THE pruned roses should be given a strong "dormant" cleanup spray after they are pruned, provided new growth already hasn't grown out. If the new growth has developed, then the dormant spray should be a much milder solution to avoid burning the new growth.

As you scrape off any remaining manure mulch that hasn't worked into the soil and you notice lumpy hard growths around the base of the rose trunks at the soil line and in the soil, they are crown gall, a bacterial disease.

This disease consists of somewhat hard growths in clusters that look as if they are very small developing grapes joined together to form a mass cluster. It also may be sponge-like or a hard lump with short roots growing through it.

WE'VE also had some of our garden readers send us roots of roses that had circular clumps of crown gall growth choking the roots.

Infected roses usually are stunted in growth and produce sparse weak inferior blossoms.

We checked with two large commercial wholesale rose growers about crown gall, and neither had a definite remedy once the plants become infested. They sterilize the soil after each crop of roses have been dug, which is the hygienic thing to do. This safety factor is one of the main reasons why professional gardeners purchase quality grown roses. Home gardeners should, too.

THE MULTI-HUED ROSE SIERRA DAWN

We have helped one of our roses that had crown gall. Using a trowel with a strong handle as a crowbar, we pried and chipped off the growth, then carefully picked up the chips off the ground. The rose bush improved in growth, developed better blossoms and lasted two more years. We replaced it with a new one, first disinfecting the soil with a strong fungicide.

A rosarian hobbyist friend of ours had a similar problem with several of his roses. He not only dug away the hard knobby crown gall around the base of the bushes, but also dug them up, cut off the growths close to the trunks, disinfected the soil, then replanted them. So far, they, too, seem to have taken a new lease on life.

LONG LIVE STINKING HELLBORE!

LONDON (AP) — The dropping saxifrage, spiked speedwell, bristle fern, teesdale sandwort, monkey orchid and 10 other plants have a special friend in Parliament.

Conservative member Peter Mills, a Devonshire farmer, introduced a bill providing a three-month jail term for picking any of these plants he described as rare.

Some not so rare, such as stinking hellbore, bloody cranesbill, fritillary and 22 others, could be picked but not sold.

'PUSHED CANADA'

JFK Criticized by Diefenbaker

OTTAWA (AP) — Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker said Friday that the late President John F. Kennedy "wanted to run Canada and that's all there is to it." Diefenbaker said that when he resisted, "Kennedy decided he was going to defeat us with the assistance of the Liberal Party."

The 72-year-old Conservative told the Canadian press in an interview that he clashed with Kennedy on nuclear policy in January 1963 shortly before his Conservative minority government fell and was replaced in the April elections by a Liberal government, led by Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson.

Diefenbaker said Kennedy "made available to the Liberals in Toronto an organizer from Washington who directed the plan of attack on my government." He added: "This was Kennedy's method of revenge, and the Liberal party was the beneficiary."

DIEFENBAKER'S REMARKS were in response to a question about a Jan. 30, 1963, statement by the U.S. State Department that Canada was not pulling its weight in North American defense.

Diefenbaker said the statement was made "because Kennedy was not able to push us around — and I use the word push advisedly." Diefenbaker said he had refused to accept U.S. nuclear warheads for the 56 Bormac anti-aircraft missiles in Canada.

Douglas Harkness resigned as defense minister in the Diefenbaker government because he wanted nuclear weapons for Canadian forces.

Two days after Harkness' resignation, Diefenbaker's administration fell when it lost a confidence vote in the House of Commons.

"The day of the bomber was over," Diefenbaker said. "That has since been proved in Vietnam, where the Americans have dropped more bombs than they did in the Second World War."

Diefenbaker said Kennedy had opposed Canadian wheat sales to Red China, and "he tried to push Canada into the Organization of American States."

House Group Ends Hearing on River Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Interior subcommittee wound up a hearing Friday on bills to authorize a billion dollar Colorado River water project.

The committee heard Interior Department officials at three sessions this week on proposals for a project which would include the Central Arizona project and five smaller reclamation units in Colorado.

The group will begin consideration next Thursday of a Senate-passed bill and a House measure.

Nixon Refuses Romney Debate

New York Times Service

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, displaying the confidence of a fighter on familiar territory opened his New Hampshire primary campaign Friday by ruling out debates with Gov. George Romney of Michigan.

Nixon said he had decided that debates would not be in the best interest "of the objectives to which both Governor Romney and I are deeply dedicated."

Both men are seeking the Republican presidential nomination.

ROMNEY, considered to be Nixon's chief rival in the nation's first presidential primary here on March 12, recently challenged Nixon to a series of debates.

Nixon also said he would not enter primaries in states where favorite sons were involved. Entering them, he said, would assure the loss of such states in November.

Victory for the Republican Party this year, said Nixon, is "more important than the ambition of one man." He said he believed his background and experience made him the candidate "who can win and can do the job."

The launching of Nixon's campaign was by far the most impressive of any so far this year.

NIXON made jokes at his own expense, and there was none of the scowling and pounding of fist into palm of earlier campaigns.

Asked if he represented a "new Nixon," the former vice president said that he had given much thought to the question and decided that he was "confident without cockiness" about campaigning this time.

Today, Nixon will address a testimonial dinner in his honor at Concord and attend a reception at Amesbury College in Manchester, where Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, a Democratic presidential candidate, spoke last week.

THE POLLS here show Nixon well in front of Romney, although the governor has been campaigning with apparent success in the state. Nixon said he also planned "to shake a lot of hands" and conduct a vigorous campaign.

"Yes, and I will try to use television, despite my past record on that score," said Nixon. This was a reference to his televised debates with the late President John F. Kennedy, who defeated Nixon for the presidency in 1960. After the primary March 12, Nixon said he would run in Wisconsin, Indiana, South Dakota and Oregon. He said he had talked to the governors—or their aides—

Queries, Answers

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Q. Dwarf Meyer lemon in tub is attacked by a worm, in a cocoon near the blossom, which chews its way into the fruit stem after fruit has set. Gardener tried several sprays with no success. What to do? Also, can you give me information on feeding of the citrus? L.A.P.

A. The safe insecticide recommended for fruiting plants is one of several dusts containing a substance that controls sap-sucking and chewing pests, plus a fungicide.
Follow directions on the container label. Feed citrus preferably with a balanced plant food containing less nitrogen but more phosphoric acid, plus potash, about mid-March, June and September. Use three-fourths less amount of the fertilizer for your container plant than you would for same size plant growing in the ground. First read fertilizer label sack for feeding instructions.

Q. Where can I find seeds of an annual my neighbor grew in his yard? The seeds were obtained from Hawaii, sown July 1, and by Sept. 1 plants were mature. The foliage had turned brilliant red gold green and yellow. The plants were removed by Nov. 1. Mrs. C.E.A.

A. These plants are an annual Amaranthus "Joseph's Coat" or "Tri-Color" variety. Seeds can be obtained at most nurseries, or plants purchased in pony packs. Don't sow the seeds or set out the plants before May. They love a sunny location and a group of them planted together provide the brightest splash of colors imaginable, as if the plants were aflame!

Tips for the Week

Don't cut back frozen stalks of ginger and cannas, or frozen branches and tops of tropical hibiscus, fuch-sias, geraniums or other plants. The plants look messy but wait till new growth develops, then cut them back in March.

Newly sprouted bare root planted roses should not be mulched with manure till the new growth is out about an inch; then spread half an inch layer of manure around the plants.

—Purchase some yellow and pink callas. Plant them where they'll get about half sun and half shade.

Feed spring blooming bulbs when they begin to flower. They absorb the plant food before they go dormant. This helps them grow and blossom next year.

—Transplant any camellias that need to be moved from one part of the garden to another while they're still in bloom, before new growth starts.

Electric Hearts May Replace Transplants

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

A Long Beach heart surgeon predicted Friday that medical science will soon solve the heart-transplant problem, and that even greater success stories in surgery will be written.

The surgeon, Dr. James S. Benedict, said new drugs to prevent heart-graft rejection were reported to the medical profession only a few days ago.

Dr. Benedict, speaking in the Petroleum Club at the kickoff luncheon for the 1968 Heart Fund campaign, stated:

"We are on the threshold of finding specific substances to prevent rejection of the human heart."

He was speaking of a phenomenon known as the immune reaction—a tendency of the body to reject tissue foreign to it.

For a graft to "take," steps must be taken to suppress the rejection reaction. The problem has not been altogether solved to date.

However, when better suppressive drugs are developed, it may even be possible for surgeons "to cross the species line."

Then, it might be possible for surgeons to transplant animal hearts into man, Dr. Benedict noted.

Dr. Benedict said the best answer to heart replacement may turn out to be implantation of an artificial heart.

"My own philosophy is that we must look toward small implantable artificial hearts," he said.

Dr. Benedict said researchers at St. Mary's Hospital in Long Beach are working both on development of an artificial heart and better ways to transplant hearts. Also under investigation, he said, is preservation of donor hearts until time for transplantation surgery.

Dr. Benedict said artificial hearts will probably have to be powered electrically.

One major problem that must be solved in the development of the artificial heart, he said, is to find a mechanical pump that won't damage blood cells.

A number of research teams are working independently on development of the artificial heart, Dr. Benedict said.

Any one of them could come up with the right answers at any time, he added.

Asian Flu Strikes in Calif., L.B. Told

True Asian flu has already struck in California but has failed to spread extensively, health officials disclosed Friday.

The State Health Department, in a memo to the Long Beach Health Department, disclosed that a num-

County Chief Administrative Officer Lindon S. Hollinger Friday recommended $82,809 more in county health funds to Long Beach, then took a slap at smaller governmental agencies.

Hollinger cut back the original Long Beach request for a county outlay of $861,651 to help run the municipal health department.

He said a county staff analysis shows Long Beach should be able to get by on less — $836,415 — reflected in the final recommended increase. The present county contract provides $753,606 a year to Long Beach for health services.

"The difference between the city request and our analysis of county requirements generally reflects the ability of a large centralized agency, such as the County Health Department, to absorb minor increases in workload without proportionate over-all staffing increases," he said.

The Hollinger statement came a few days before the Dominguez-Carson incorporation election — where county-service contracts will be one of the issues if a city is formed.

Hollinger's statement also was in keeping with past county policy to try to take over municipal services.

ber of university students in California fell ill to influenza during January.

All had spent the holiday season in Eastern or Midwestern states, where it is presumed the patients were exposed to the influenza virus.

The State Viral and Rickettsial Laboratory, Berkeley, has confirmed that the students were infected with "Type A Asian" influenza, according to Dr. I. D. Litwack, Long Beach health officer.

True influenza has been found so far in Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Alameda, Marin and Santa Clara counties.

But there is no evidence of widespread flu in any California area, the State Health Department emphasized.

Dr. Litwack speculated the flu may have failed to take hold in California because of exposure of residents to the ailment not too long ago.

The phenomenon, he said, may reflect existing immunity to the disease — immunity conferred by having already had the ailment in the near past.

Even though true flu has not broken out widely, there have been marked increases in respiratory and gastrointestinal ailments of short duration, Dr. Litwack said.

The gastrointestinal upsets have been termed "intestinal flu" by some persons — although there is no such disease.

SHIP WAS SCHOOL Frosh Coed, 70, Home From Sea

By BARBARA KNESIS

A zebra skin sprawled across the living room rug. A wooden mask worn by African tribal dancers more than 200 years ago for happy occasions sat on a nearby table. A psychedelic trunk and assorted travel cases rested in the corner.

Mrs. Mary (Ga Ga) Dowd, Seal Beach's 70-year-old coed, was back from her first semester of college.

The freshman grandmother had been aboard Chapman College's World Campus Afloat — with more than 500 liberal arts students — as it cruised into such ports as Japan, India, Thailand, Hawaii, mixing travel and study.

THE TALL, SLENDER Mrs. Dowd stood in the middle of her daughter's Huntington Beach home wrapping herself in sheer black cloth while her son-in-law, daughter and grandson watched.

"It goes something like this," she said as she tried without immediate success to demonstrate the art of sari making.

"I got to work this thing out, so excuse me while I try."

She tucked an edge of cloth in, played a bit more and, when at last she was satisfied, she took it off, folded it up and sat down.

The silver-haired coed looked at her grandson, Ed Shomaker, and said, "He was the one who started the whole thing, and everybody all over the world knows it too."

MRS. DOWD SAID her grandson was on the SS Ryndam last spring, and when he returned he told her, "Grandmother this is for you."

Then he began to tutor her. It had been 51 years since Mrs. Dowd was graduated from high school in Wauwatosa, Wis.

There was a bit of brushing up to do since she was required to go through the rituals that face all college freshmen.

Ridings, Cameron Named L.B. Salesmen of the Year

Two civic leaders who played a major role in bringing the Queen Mary to Long Beach were named "Salesmen of the Year" Friday by the city's Sales and Marketing Executives.

Sam Cameron, Independent Press-Telegram general manager, and H. E. (Bud) Ridings Jr., harbor commissioner, were honored at a banquet attended by 300 persons in the Petroleum Club, 3638 Linden Ave.

THE ANNUAL honor has traditionally gone to only one recipient, but this year the executives found both Cameron and Ridings had made "the greatest voluntary contribution to the City of Long Beach during 1967."

Entertainment at the banquet was an "Up With People" concert provided by Sing-Out Rio Hondo.

Bill Blankenship, president of the executive group, said his organization also honored 20 "outstanding salesman" among their own members.

Ridings Wednesday was honored as "Outstanding Citizen of the Year" by the Exchange Club of Long Beach for his work in bringing the Queen Mary to the International City.

3 Southland GIs Reported Killed in Viet

Three Southlanders were among 60 Army men the Defense Department listed Friday as killed in action in Vietnam.

They were Sgt. Steven C. Powers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Powers, 15802 S. Harris Ave., Compton; Pfc. Robert B. England II, son of Mrs. No-reen J. England, 15756 Marlinton Drive, Whittier; and Pfc. Richard S. Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest J. Russell, 2203 N. Baker Ave., Santa Ana.

L.B. Building Gets Off to Average Start in '68

Construction in Long Beach got off to about an average start in January. The City Building Department issued permits for a total valuation of $4,473,965.

The total was considerably under the January, 1967, valuation of $7.5 million, but that figure was largely the result of two major permits: a $2.6 million warehouse for Douglas Aircraft Co. and a $1.4 million department store at 4550 Atlantic Ave.

Residential construction showed strength last month. Permits were issued for 21 single-family dwellings, two duplexes and four apartments with a total of 16 units. This total of 41 dwelling units accounted for $818,100 of the month's valuation.

In January last year, by comparison, only 14 new residential units were issued permits.

Total valuation last month include $3,602,915 in building, $309,415 in plumbing and $561,635 in electrical work. Of the total, $2.7 million was for new construction and $901,500 for alterations and repairs.

The new projects included a $260,000, 78-unit addition to a motel, a $225,000 church, three industrial buildings valued at $472,100, a $398,000 convalescent hospital and three office buildings totaling $176,525.

Find Sailor Guilty in Stabbing Death

By BOB SANDERS

Former sailor Roberto Arocha Friday was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the stab-slashing of a 78-year-old Long Beach cafe owner.

Superior Court Judge Donald Dunbar, who heard the case without a jury, set a probation and sentence hearing March 7 for the 21-year-old Arocha in Department E of Superior Court.

Arocha, a sailor attached to the USS Navarro at the time of the slaying, stabbed Glenn Wesley Rhodes, proprietor of Helen's Coffee Shop at 801 E. Third St. twice in the chest last May 30 with a three-inch pocket knife.

Find Youth Dead on Rocky Beach

The body of a Palos Verdes High School junior was found Friday crumpled on the rocky beach of Lunada Bay, where it apparently lay for several hours after the youth fell from a 200-foot cliff.

Police said the death of William Roy Inman Jr., 17, of 1549 Granvia Altamira, Palos Verdes Estates, was accidental.

The body was discovered by a Torrance youth, Glenn Mitchell, 18, of 4735 Narrot St., who spotted it while walking along the cliff top and called Palos Verdes Estates police at 12:06 p.m.

The victim, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Inman, disappeared from home Tuesday, but the parents had not filed a missing person report, officers said.

Police summoned a Coast Guard helicopter to raise the body from the narrow beach to the cliff top.

Officers said identification of the youth was difficult but they found a scrap of paper with his name on it in his jeans and determined his home address by checking with the high school. The identification was confirmed by his father.

The youth had been registered at the school in January and previously attended private schools, according to police.

Funeral arrangements are pending at White and Day Mortuary, Redondo Beach.

Investigators traced Arocha through a paper plate on which the names of the high scorers in the shooting gallery game had been scribbled.

Police said Arocha told two of his sailor friends, after leaving the coffee shop, he was going to go back and "take care of the old man."

Rhodes was found bleeding to death on the steps leading from the cafe up to his apartment by his wife, Helen, who said she heard her husband call her name and scream for help.

Arocha, dressed in a tan sweater and white shirt open at the neck, listened without expression to the final arguments of Deputy Dist. Atty. Charles Sheldon and Defense Atty. Kenneth Rosenstock Friday, then lowered his eyes to the floor as Judge Dunbar read the verdict.

3 Cities Approve Helicopter Patrol

4 Suspects Freed After GI Slain

By RALPH McCLURG

The cities of Downey, Santa Fe Springs and Norwalk are the first of eight cities to approve a joint powers agreement which will provide helicopter patrol to augment law enforcement services in a proposed Southeast Regional area.

If approved by the other cities—Pico Rivera, La Mirada, Bell Gardens, Commerce and Whittier—the agreement with the Sheriff's office will go into effect July 1.

The proposal provides for Sky Knight patrol for a two year period. Cost breakdown for the first year is Downey, $53,690; Norwalk $45,010; and Santa Fe Springs $27,600.

Tuesday, the county Board of Supervisors, without comment, turned a proposal by Sheriff Peter Pitchess for a county-wide helicopter patrol over to its administrative officer for study and a report.

The sheriff based his recommendation on a report from the 18-month Lakewood Sky Knight program, which showed that robberies in that city declined 8 per cent.

Pitchess urged supervisors to allocate $2 million to purchase 20 helicopters for use in areas of the metropolitan basin which do not presently have the aerial patrol.

Following the 18-month trial period, Lakewood officials purchased three helicopters to be operated by sheriff's deputies. Neighboring cities of Artesia, Bellflower, Hawaiian Gardens, Cerritos and Paramount also participate in the helicopter crime patrol.

7 L.B. Area Cities' Sales Volume Rises

The volume of sales — on which state taxes are levied — went up in seven cities of southeast Los Angeles County and fell in six in the third quarter of 1957, compared with the same period last year, according to a State Board of Equalization preliminary report.

Downey showed the top increase of 15.5 per cent, for sales volume of $48,937,000 during the 1967 quarter.

Bellflower reported a slight decline, the report listing 3 per cent less taxable sales, but local officials expect a final adjustment for the quarter's last month will put it above the 1966 rate.

Increases in other cities are: Lakewood and Santa Fe Springs, 6 per cent; Pico Rivera 7 per cent; South Gate 9.6 per cent; Whittier, 6.5 per cent; and Montebello, 1.5 per cent.

Declines were listed as follows: Compton, 4.1 per cent; Huntington Park, 3 per cent; Lynwood, 2.4 per cent; Norwalk, 10.5 per cent and Paramount, 3.9 per cent.

Final reports will modify the figures when complete payments for the quarter on allocations of tax shares to cities for local use.

Evar P. Peterson Gets Award For Survival Projects

Evar P. Peterson, coordinator of disaster services for Long Beach, has been honored by the State Department of Education for contributions to community survival programs.

The department forwarded an Award of Merit to Mayor Edwin W. Wade for presentation to Peterson.

Vincent J. Young, supervisor of the state's Civil Defense Adult Education Program, said Peterson is "long overdue for such an award."

3 Fullerton Profs Ask Mime Injunction

By BOB GEIVET

Three California State College at Fullerton professors, fired by an administration ban against the San Francisco Mime Troupe, Friday asked Santa Ana Superior Court for an injunction against College President William B. Langsdorf.

The administration promptly countered with its own injunction, demanding the court uphold Dr. Langsdorf's decision not to allow the controversial players to present "The Olive Pits" on campus next Wednesday.

Dr. George Forest, associate professor of drama, who defended the drama department's production of the sex-oriented one-act play "The Beard" last November, spearheaded the rebellion against Langsdorf, pickup stars.

HE WAS JOINED by Dr. Stuart Silvers, assistant professor of philosophy, and Dr. William Lindner, assistant professor of psychology, in the unexpected court action.

The action followed Dr. Forest's statement that the mime troupe would be brought onto campus "even if we professors have to escort them."

"If the injunction is issued (to the administration) and we are not allowed to proceed, it might mean a confrontation with the police," he warned, explaining that he was certain that armed guards would be present to enforce the ban.

HE ALSO WAS considering "an interdisciplinary move, perhaps a private showing," he explained.

One way or another, he indicated, the Jack London Society, for which he said, he and the other professors acted, are insistent that "The Olive Pits" be performed.

Cal State Faculty Council voted against allowing the production chiefly because of "the recent controversy, aroused by 'The Beard'."

That dispute triggered a two-day hearing by the State Senate Education Committee.

The Associated Students also recommended against the mime troupe and Ronald Bristow, dean of students, acting for Dr. Langsdorf, issued the ban order.

In an earlier statement he conceded there was controversy but he gave no hint of the legal journey.

"They (Jack London Society) have chosen to disregard the advice of faculty and student body, as well as an administrative decision. In light of these circumstances," Bristow's statement continued, "the administration is taking steps to insure that the wishes of the faculty and students are being carried out."

Grade School Activated by Live Rocket

FRUITVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Two sixth-graders brought an eye-catching object to a "Show and Tell" session at Fruitville Elementary — a live rocket from World War II.

Principal Gene Williamson spotted it as the boys stepped from a school bus. A check showed the rocket was armed.

A bomb squad from MacDill Air Force Base at Tampa disarmed the rocket and another one the boys had at home. The boys said they found them in a target practice area used during the war.

A MacDill spokesman said the rocket was about one foot long and weighed about 30 pounds.

In an earlier statement he conceded there was controversy but he gave no hint of the legal journey.

"They (Jack London Society) have chosen to disregard the advice of faculty and student body, as well as an administrative decision. In light of these circumstances," Bristow's statement continued, "the administration is taking steps to insure that the wishes of the faculty and students are being carried out."

Student musicians in the Bellflower Unified School District will have an unusual opportunity Monday when David Frisina, concert master and soloist for the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, conducts a string clinic.

The concert master will meet with the elementary and junior high school orchestras in the morning, and will spend the afternoon with high school musical units.

Dr. Charlotte Stevenson, district coordinator of music, said violinist Frisina will demonstrate string techniques and conduct the orchestras in several selections.

LA BELLE OTERO. By Arthur H. Lawis. Trident, $5.95.

Born in Spain, one of seven illegitimate children, baptised Augustina, the singer and dancer who was known as La Belle Otero earned more than any courtesan in history. Her lovers included seven members of royal families and millionaires. For love of her, men looted their companies and embezzled from banks. Author Lawis tells a true tale that never flags.

THE FAMILY LETTERS OF SAMUEL BUTLER, 1841-1886. Edited by Arnold Silver. Stanford, $6.50.

These letters, most of them here published for the first time, are important for a fuller understanding of Butler's novel "The Way of All Flesh." They reveal Butler as strong of character, and hence show that it is incorrect to identify the weak Ernest Pontifex of "Flesh" with Butler himself. The letters explain Butler's rebellion against his parents (he refused to enter the ministry — his father was Canon Butler; his family was cool to his literary work).

OBSERVATIONS AND REFLECTIONS. Made in the Course of a Journey Through France, Italy and Germany. By Hester Lynch Piozzi. Edited by Herbert Barrows. University of Michigan Press, $12.50.

Mrs. Piozzi had been Mrs. Thrale, the good friend of Samuel Johnson. Like so many Britons, she, with husband made the grand tour of the continent, and she kept a perceptive journal of the journey, a fascinating account of the customs and cultures of the countries they visited.

JEAN GIRAUDOUX PLAYS. Amphitryon, Intermezzo, Ondine. Translated by Roger Gellert. Oxford, $5.75.

The sophisticated comedy on classical themes (the story of Jupiter and Alcmena in "Amphitryon"); the comedy of the French provinces (the beautifully poetic fantasy of "Intermezzo"); the retelling of the fairy tale that is "Ondine" — Giraudoux handled them all masterfully. Oxford has also published "Three Plays" by Giraudoux ("Judith," "Tiger at the Gates" and "Duel of Angels."

Gunther Schuller, Pianist Mindru Katz at Pavilion

By DANIEL CARIAGA
Music Critic

Conductor-composer Gunther Schuller and pianist Mindru Katz are the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra's guests this ninth week of the current concert season. They gave their colorful program Thursday and Friday nights in the Music Center Pavilion, and will repeat it at Sunday's matinee.

For his West Coast debut, the Bucharest-born Israeli pianist chose as his vehicle the Schumann Concerto. While admiring, as did his friendly audience, the strength and directness of Katz's pianism, one ought to point out that the concerto revealed rather more about the performer than he about it.

HIS SIZABLE tone, as large and clear as any we have heard in this hall, is seldom harsh, though it is forte-oriented, even in so "grazioso" a context as Schumann's Intermezzo. His dexterity, more than adequate to the demands of this, or, we should guess, other sternly demanding works, appears reliable and unfeathered, if, again, generous rather than discreet in the matter of dynamics.

His purely musical predictions would seem to include devotion to note-clarity, and an uncomplicated approach to the subtleties of Schumann's Romanticism.

WITH SCHULLER and the Philharmonic never very far away — as an accompanist, the smiling composer is accident-prone — Katz's reading of the Concerto was more brilliant than penetrating, more prosaic than poetic. In another concerto, perhaps, or in a solo recital, the debut might have been really auspicious; as it was, one felt a sense of unfulfillment.

In an evening that began with Mozart's Adagio and Fugue in C Minor, K. 546, and ended with Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," the other focus of our interest fell upon Schuller's own "Triumph" (1967).

Though "Triumph" — the title relates to the division of the orchestra into three concertinos — is demonstrably serial, it is not apt to offend anyone, for it sounds neo-Impressionistic, not unlike the same writer's "Seven Studies on Themes of Paul Klee" (1959), and almost programmatic.

Self-indulgence, I believe, led the composer to stretch to 17 minutes what might have been condensed to, say, eight, but, since it is the self-indulgence of talent, one needn't complain too loudly. The extended middle portion, resembling an updated, fitfully hallucinatory "Flight of the Bumblebee," for instance, outlasts its welcome. So too, eventually, may Gunther Schuller. But not just yet.

Reno Hotel Auctioned to Teamsters

RENO (AP) — The Riverside Hotel, where gamblers and divorcees once mingled on the banks of the Truckee River, was sold at public auction Friday to a Teamsters Union pension fund which held first deed of trust on the property.

The state closed the hotel's casino last September on a cheating charge and revoked the gambling licenses of hotel owners James H. Lloyd, Andrew Desimone and Bernard Richter.

The Teamsters offered the only bid of $1.7 million. Payment due on their deed of trust totals $2,745,000. The difference between the bid and the payment due remains deficient against Raymond and Selma Spector, who owned the hotel — one of Reno's oldest — at the time the note was made.

Eartha Kitt, Composer in Festival Row

SAN REMO, Italy (UPI) — Eartha Kitt won warm applause but no prizes in a pop music festival that mixed tears and quarrels with love ballads.

Miss Kitt's rendition of an Italian song, performed over the objections of the composer, brought the most enthusiastic applause of the evening but the judges declined to include it in the top six songs.

The American singer, whose outburst at a White House luncheon left Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson near tears last month, burst into sobs herself when told she could not sing the song, "What's It Worth to Me?"

Composer Carlo Alberto Rossi said he did not feel she could do it properly, but festival organizers said she had an ironclad contract and Rossi reluctantly agreed to let her sing.

Methodists Will Hear 3 Views

Negro, Jewish and Roman Catholic clerics will be hosted on successive Sunday nights by Los Altos Methodist Church, 5950 Willow St., in a "Mission in Understanding" program which will be climaxed on the fourth Sunday evening by a joint musical program of all three, plus the host congregation.

"Black Man, American, Christian" will be the subject this Sunday of guest Rev. Douglas Fitch, pastor of Epworth Methodist Church of Los Angeles. Program begins at 6 p.m., following a 5 p.m. potluck supper. The general public is invited.

Rev. Fitch is a graduate of Greenville College, Ill., and Gammon Theological Seminary in Atlanta, and was a social worker in San Bernardino before being called to the Epworth post. He will bring members of his congregation to the dinner and program.

ATTITUDE CHANGE GREATEST AMONG CATHOLICS

Views of Other Faiths Told in Candid Session

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

After centuries of strife, the world's great religions are moving into a new era of mutual respect and cordiality.

The changed climate was strikingly evident at a conference on interreligious understanding held in Washington, D.C. It was sponsored by the Temple of Understanding Inc., a seven-year-old nonprofit corporation which seeks to advance religious harmony.

Participating were representatives of Roman Catholic and Protestant Christianity, Judaism, Islam, Buddhism, Hinduism and Confucianism. The question put to each speaker was: "What validity does your faith accord to other religions?"

Rev. Dr. John Haughey, professor of theology at Georgetown University, said the Roman Catholic view of other faiths has undergone significant change since the Vatican Council. Without abandoning belief in the uniqueness of Jesus Christ as sole mediator between God and man, Catholicism today officially acknowledges that "authentic religious perception has existed and continues to exist outside Christianity" and there are "good and holy" things to be found in other religions.

He said this new attitude is "not a subtle conversion strategy" but a sincere recognition that "the Christ for whom we labor is already present," although anonymously, in all of man's aspirations toward God.

Rev. Dr. Lowell Russell Ditzgen, director of the National Presbyterian Center, while disavowing any attempt to speak for all Protestants, expressed the conviction that the majority of his co-religionists today are "ready to listen to, learn from, cooperate with and appreciate the values of" other faiths.

He said Protestant Christianity must continue to be a "missionary religion" because it operates under a clear mandate from its Lord to preach His gospel to all nations. But it can and will work with other faiths, in a spirit of mutual respect, toward practical goals of justice and peace which all have in common.

Dr. Isaac Frank, executive vice president of the Jewish Community Council of Greater Washington, said Judaism "judges men by their conduct but passes no judgment on their theology." It teaches that "Judaism is the only valid religion for the Jewish people" but acknowledges that "different peoples seek God in different particular ways, each being valid for the people that have chosen it." For this reason, he said, Judaism traditionally has refrained from actively seeking converts from other faiths.

The Moslem view was voiced by Dr. Ali H. Abdel Kader, director of the Islamic Center in Washington. He said Islam has always regarded Moses, Jesus and Buddha as true prophets of God, but insists that Mohammed was "the seal of the prophets" — the only one to whom God revealed his truth "in its entirety." Therefore, while granting religious freedom to Jews and Christians who live in Moslem-governed territories, Islam holds that it is "the true religion" and no other religion is fully acceptable to God.

Bishop Shinsho Hanayama of San Francisco, head of the Buddhist Churches of America, said Buddhism "considers all different religious traditions to be paths to the same summit." While it believes that Buddhism is the shortest and straightest path, it teaches that "even the most winding donkey trail" can lead ultimately to the top.

Confucianism, the ancient religion of China, is "certainly among the most tolerant of all religions toward other faiths and creeds," said Dr. Wen Yen Tsao, professor of East Asian studies at Milligan College, Tennessee. He said it was a basic teaching of

Sir M.G. Raja Ram, cultural minister of the Indian Embassy, said Hinduism "has always believed in a diversified approach to a common goal" and holds that "even the most crude religion has its place in the scheme of things." He quoted from an old Indian folk song:

"Into the bosom of the one great sea
Flow streams that come from hills on every side,

"Their names are various as their springs,
And thus in every land do men bow down
To one great God, tho known by many names."

Climaxing a visit of military installations on the West Coast, Right Rev. Arnold M. Lewis, Episcopal Bishop for the Armed Forces, visited training facilities at Camp Pendleton.

After observing an M-16

quick firing demonstration the bishop joined Maj. Gen. Lewis J. Fields, Camp Pendleton base commander on a tour of the Ranch House and Chapel, the oldest structures at Camp Pendleton.

Bishop Lewis is responsible for the recruiting, screening and endorsing of clergy for the Episcopal Church, the military chaplaincy and the Veterans Administration chaplaincy.

5 PROTESTANT LEADERS

Praise LBJ on Handling of Pueblo Grab

United Press International

Some church leaders who have been critical of President Johnson over Vietnam are praising him for his handling of the new Asian crisis provoked by North Korea's seizure of the U.S. ship Pueblo.

The President received this week a telegram signed by the leaders of five major Protestant bodies with 19 million members. They commended him for "the restraint and patience which you are demonstrating in trying to find a diplomatic solution."

The telegram was signed by Rev. Dr. Ben M. Herber, president of the United Church of Christ; William P. Thompson, stated clerk of the United Presbyterian Church; Bishop Donald H. Tippet, president of the Methodist Council of Bishops; Rev. Dr. A. Dale Fiers, executive secretary of the International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ); and Dr. Frank E. Johnson, associate general secretary of the American Baptist Convention.

"We do not question the wisdom of conducting missions of the kind to which the Pueblo was assigned," they said. "We are deeply concerned over the welfare and safety of members of her crew... We understand the need for you to prepare to meet further unprovoked armed aggression."

But the Protestant leaders said they "also believe that this great nation should not and need not be provoked into the hasty use of armed force" in response to North Korea's "brazen and unprovoked aggression."

They urged the President to "continue your efforts to resolve the Pueblo incident by diplomatic means," and commended him for referring the problem to the United Nations Security Council.

"We do not pretend to speak for all of the 19 million members of our churches," they said, "but we know that the vast majority of them long for peace and abhor war."

BOOKS

HOW TO ENJOY THIS MOMENT. By Samuel Silver. Trident, $4.95.

Dr. Silver, a rabbi in Stamford, Conn., has culled familiar and unfamiliar quotations from the wisdom of the ages for this inventory on how to achieve a daily festival of happiness through optimism, friendship and universal brotherhood.

He suggests that everyone concerned with making the most of life keep a personal "charge card" for wallet or purse with notations of words, phrases or sentences to be used as permanent suggestions whenever the spirit needs recharging. Two of his cards may be detached from the inside flap of the dust cover; one bears this inspirational bit by the author: "O God, as I go to sleep tonight—I pray to you with all my might.— Help me to be gay and bright.— Always be my parents' delight.— And teach me to enjoy what's right."

All should grasp, he insists, for the bouquet Adlai Stevenson gave to Eleanor Roosevelt when he eulogized her: "She would rather light a candle than curse the darkness."

To the cynical who say God is dead and the grave ends the human comedy, he answers: Moses, Jesus, Maimonides, Spinoza, Shakespeare, Beethoven, Lincoln, Edison, Debussy, Van Gogh, Will Rogers, Gershwin, Roosevelt, Cole Porter, Robert Frost, John Kennedy. And Norman Vincent Peale, Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, Walt Whitman, Bill Veck, Babe Ruth, George Santayana, Pearl Buck, Helen Keller...

And, he challenges, is the gloomy Gus, the defeatist, the masochist, the aggressor, the transgressor—is any of them really living?—MORRY RABIN

CONFIDENT LIVING

It Seemed an Impossible Idea

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

A terrific idea hit teenager Bill Danforth during class one day. In a couple of minutes something happened that affected the whole course of his life.

Mr. Krall, the teacher, had launched into one of his tirades on health. He was considered a fanatic on the subject. It was his pet theme. The boys were used to his lectures, so mostly shrugged them off. But this time Mr. Krall, eyes flashing, pointed straight at him and said: "Bill, I dare you to be the healthiest boy in this class!"

Bill was jolted to attention. It seemed an impossible ideal. Of all boys in class he was the least robust. He was thin, scrawny, sickly. Living in marshy farm country he had a notion that he was full of "swamp poisons." And he had been told glumly that unless he used real caution he would probably not live long. So he took poor health for granted.

But the teacher's insistent voice rang on and got through to him this time: "I dare you to chase those chills and fevers out of your system. I dare you to fill your body with fresh air, pure water, wholesome food and daily exercise until your cheeks are red, your chest full, your legs strong..."

A RESPONSE came welling up from the depths of the boy's being and surged through him. He felt the fire of victory over self. The older man's enthusiasm and conviction had roused in him a will to overcome; and inwardly he took the dare—he would make himself healthy and strong.

And the boy held to that challenge. He did develop a rugged physique. Moreover, this first taste of achieving set the key for an outstanding career. Eventually he became chairman of the board of Ralston Purina Company.

I last saw William H. Danforth at age 86. It was in a crowded lobby of a St. Louis hotel. I asked, "How do you maintain your magnificent physical condition? Let me in on your secret!" He needed no encouragement. "I will show you the exercises I do." And proceeded to put himself through a series of calisthenics, unconscious of the numerous bystanders gathered to watch.

Mr. Danforth wrote a little book called "I Dare You," in which he challenged people to activate their latent powers. For example, a salesman once came to his office and said spiritedly, "Mr. Danforth, I'm going to quit."

"Why? Give me one good reason why," snapped Danforth.

"Because I'm just no salesman," the man answered. "I don't have the ability or the nerve. So I'm quitting."

Danforth looked him long and straight in the eye and said, "If I know how to evaluate—you have all the qualifications of a producing salesman. So I dare you to get out of here right now and come back with more orders than you ever got in a single day. I dare you! Get going!" Instantly he saw in the salesman's eyes a gleam of battle. He turned on his heel and walked out. That night he came back exhilarated. He had done precisely what his boss had dared him to do. He had topped his previous record. He went on to become one of the best producers in the company.

AN OLD saying declares:

"When fate throws a dagger at you, there are two ways to catch it: either by the blade or by the handle." Catch the dagger by the blade and it may cut you, perhaps injure you. But if you catch it by the handle you can use it to fight your way through. When faced with a big obstacle seize it by the handle. In other words, let a challenge rouse your fighting spirit. You can't get anywhere without a good fighting spirit. So get it going. It will draw your latent powers into action.

Remember that you are spiritually conditioned and, as such, have within you what it takes to overcome even the seemingly impossible. Pit that inner resistant power against any obstacle confronting you.

A contractor who often has to drill through solid rock to lay pipes says it pretty well: "When the rock is hard we get harder than the rock. When the job is tough we get tougher than the job."

Don't let any obstacle stop you.

PETER MERRICK

New Minister at NLB Church

North Long Beach Church of Christ, at 1128 E. Artesia Blvd., has called Peter Merrick as its new minister. Merrick, a native New Zealander, has been preaching 10 years though he is only 28.

After graduating from Freed-Hardeman College in Tennessee in 1961, he returned to his native land, where he worked until returning here with his wife, Paula Sue, formerly of Yucca and their three children. He is taking additional work at Pepperdine College.

Mr. Merrick returns to Wellington, New Zealand this month to be the principal speaker in a three week "campaign for Christ."

ROME — Leaders of the Roman Catholic Church and the World Council of Churches announced the appointment of Rev. George H. Dunne, an American Jesuit priest, as secretary of their joint Exploratory Committee on Society, Development and Peace.

FROM THE PULPIT

Music affects most everyone in some way. Not all people respond to the same type or sounds of music. Some folk respond to the artistry of music, while others respond to the heart and the message of music.

Church music must also vary. It cannot all be of one type, else many people of a congregation never benefit from the ministry of music.

Calvary is a musical church. The ministry of our musical program is in keeping with the other ministries of the church—warm, personal, and with an appeal to the heart.

The famous STAMPS QUARTET will sing here this Sunday night. This nationally-known quartet specializes in southern gospel singing—music designed to express the emotions of a redeemed sinner to his God through Christ.

Listen every Sunday morning to our broadcast. Station and time are listed below.

'Good News' Hits 9 Million

The American Bible Society disclosed this week that its runaway best-seller, "Good News for Modern Man," has passed the nine million mark in sales.

"Good News" is the New Testament in an easy-to-read, idiomatic modern translation called the "Today's English Version" or "TEV." It's available through Bible Society offices and many local churches in a paperback edition priced at 35 cents.

and a vinyl-covered edition which costs $1. The society barely breaks even at these prices, but it is concerned not with making money but with making the scriptures available to as many persons as possible.

The huge sales of "Good News" came as a complete surprise to society officials. When it was first published, a little more than a year ago, they figured they'd do well to distribute a million copies the first year.

The Living God

Anyone whose life has been touched by the healing power of divine Love, anyone whose prayers have brought a glimpse of what it means to be spiritually alive, knows from his own experience about "the living God" spoken of in the Bible. Awareness of His presence comes in different ways to each individual, but it grows only with deep prayer and study. Christian Science Reading Rooms and church services are there to help. You are always welcome.

About 'Inner City' Work; Free-Swinging Letters

By LES RODNEY

Is there merit in a point recently made by a religious leader that suburban church and synagogue members might volunteer in greater numbers or inner-city service projects if they are confronted with realistic, modest, practical, clearly-defined things to do?

At present, suggests Rabbi Richard J. Israel, chaplain to Jewish students at Yale, "religious institutions are not structured" to realistically send the average well-meaning person out for inner-city service. (It is not state secret that "inner city" today means just plain old-fashioned poor folks, in the majority of cases, though not altogether, darker-skinned Americans.)

"People are shy and afraid," says the rabbi. "They don't especially want to be confronted by hostile or 'different' people, and so they don't want to confront the conditions of the inner city. The immensity of the problem makes them feel guilty about their own comfortable lives."

Vague exhortations to "do something" about the ghetto's plight do not produce much action. Rabbi Israel recommends that professional social service agencies let suburbanites "know what they can do beyond sending Thanksgiving turkeys — and let them know in terms that are realistic for middle class church or synagogue members."

"It's easy to condemn religious people for not living up to the ideals they claim to hold," he concludes. "It's more useful to give them tasks about which they can actually do something."

The rabbi wasn't trying to touch all bases on this big topic, but it might be added that one of the practical preparations for overcoming the suburban fear of the "different" is some preliminary low-pressure social interchange. Yes, the kind of church exchange programs sometimes derided as "meaningless" and "tokenism."

Certainly these programs are not the basic solutions to anything. But they have been found useful in local churches in giving their people a more relaxed feeling, plus renewed appreciation for the basic dignity of all kinds of people, as opposed to some the caricatures that take shape in a vacuum.

Incidentally, from all reports, one of the more thoughtful local pioneering efforts in this direction of practical outreach is to be found at Grace Methodist Church.

WOULD YOU believe it is 25 years — to the day — since four young chaplains of different faiths, arms linked in calm prayer to the one God they all served, went down into the city waters of Greenland with the torpedoed troopship Dorchester?

Subsequently immortalized as The Four Chaplains, they had dispensed life belts and encouragement during the panic and confusion, and when the supply ran out, took off their own and handed them to four more men who were about to jump. Then they took each other by the arm and went down with the ship — together. At a time when the word "ecumenical" would have brought a "come again?"

Local memorial observance will be Monday at noon in the American Legion Hall, 3252 Florista St., Los Alamitos, advises Chaplain Ed Gaethke.

IN ITS unusual free-swinging style, the conservative evangelical magazine Christianity Today printed a lively sampling of letters it received commenting on its article "NCC Hosts the Radicals," which dealt (rather harshly) with a National Council of Churches conclave at Detroit.

A letter of praise by Harold Lindsell, professor of Bible at Wheaton College, said "I think you are hitting the right target when you go after the NCC and its revolutionary strategy. They are to be commended for their frankness... They employ situational ethics — that the end justifies the means — and forget that nowhere did the

CHURCH HUMOR

Latin Violence Explored

The fifth annual Catholic Inter-American Cooperation Program (CICOP) closed this week in St. Louis with a declaration that the Christian Church has the resources to understand and participate in revolutionary struggles for social reconstruction.

Dr. Richard Shaull, professor of ecumenics at Princeton Theological Seminary, told delegates from Europe, Canada, Latin America and the United States:

"When the old order is no longer able to serve men adequately and is too sclerotic to change fast enough to keep up with events, it will have to be brought down or broken open by conflict and violence of one sort or another, and the dynamics of God's action in the world moves in that direction.

"In that situation, the violence of the struggle will be determined primarily by those in power, for it is up to them to decide whether the old can make way for the new without total confrontation and disruption. This does not justify any use of violence at any time by the agents of social change, but it does put the primary responsibility for dealing with this question where it belongs."

Tells Aim of 'Survival' Grouping

A charter has been issued by the state to "National United Effort for Survival Inc.," headed by Elder James McWilliams of Long Beach, an evangelist for racial harmony.

At an open meeting and banquet at Howard Johnson's Restaurant, Rev. Jeff P. Frazier was named secretary treasurer, with board members Arthur Jackson, Rev. Andrew Lee Gaither, John E. Boozer and Edna L. Boozer.

McWilliams explains the purpose of the organization as follows:

"It is a nondenominational coordinating public service agency for all races designed to promote racial harmony and assist local and federal government in their efforts to reduce the serious crime wave.

"Activities will include lectures by prominent people in the field of human relations, presentation of radio and television programs, and circulation of periodicals to implement the ideas and principles.

"Survival of America depends wholly on the collective effort of all citizens, working in unity on a national scale, understanding the enemy's source of power and methods employed to divide and conquer our nation.

"Racial inharmonia makes national unity impossible, and without national unity we are a nation divided against ourselves. As it is written in the Scriptures so shall it be: 'A house divided against itself shall not stand.'

"Therefore, I sincerely call for a united stand against all forms of subversive activity, by all citizens who are concerned about survival and a greater future for America, a future with honor and respect by all nations who are also seeking their way out of darkness due to moral

and a remarkable vocal birds to sexy dames, doting grandmas and cackling witches.

For 20 years a frequent cry from Hollywood producers with feminine-voice problems has been, "Get

Ann Sheridan died before she could re-record dialogue for her last television show that extraneous noises had ruined in the sound track.

Miss Foray, after listening carefully to Miss Sheridan's voice, did the recording, matching the words to Ann's lip movements.

"Sometimes the producer

"And a lot of young actresses whom I can't mention do a lousy job and they call me in to pull them out of the soup by replacing their voices. How did they get the job in the first place? Because they look good."

On a "Rawhide" she re-recorded the entire dialogue of one week's guest star.

It taxes Miss Foray, who works almost constantly, to remember all the voices she supplies, especially in television.

"I'm Axis Sally in '12

o'Clock High,' Knothead and Splinter on 'Woody Woodpecker,' and I'm all over the dial on the Saturday cartoon shows."

Her voice changes as she describes various roles: "I do French girls, Cockney accent, Svenska, and ah do Suth'n dialects."

The secret is "having a good ear and flexible vocal cords."

BORN in Springfield, Mass., Miss Foray came to Hollywood with her parents at 17 and started a local radio show, writing and playing all the parts, then graduated to network radio.

She lives in suburban Woodland Hills with her writer husband, Hobart Donovan; two terrifyingly friendly great Danes weighing a combined 345 pounds, and a withdrawn, 14-year-old cat named Henry.

Miss Foray supplies nearly all the witches' voices used in Hollywood. Pat Buttram once asked her to do one over the telephone when he had a local radio program.

"When I got through doing that cackling, hee-hee-hee voice," she recalls,
"there were 15 people standing around the phone booth wondering what this nut was doing."

Spencer, Quarry Go Today

Combined News Services OAKLAND — Thad Spencer, still the needler, and Jerry Quarry, showing Irish irritation at Thad's jibes, went into virtual seclusion Friday on the eve of today's fight.

Their bout could lead the winner to the world heavy-weight championship—and millions of dollars.

Las Vegas' bookmakers made Spencer a 2-3 favorite Friday. Quarry was a 13-10 underdog.

They weighed in Friday morning. Quarry at 193½ and Spencer 200½.

Quarry, with 14 kayos in a 25-1-4 record, is known as a boxer, although his 32-5 record includes 13 knockouts.

Th fight will be televised throughout the United States—except within 150 miles of Oakland—and Mexico City, and via satellite to Europe and Japan. There will be no radio.

The fight is the second semifinal in the World Boxing Assn. elimination series to pick a successor to Cassius Clay, from whom it lifted the championship after he refused to answer the military draft.

Jimmy Ellis won the other semifinal and awaits the Spencer-Quarry winner for a title fight in March or April.

Quarry, a matter-of-fact 22-year-old from Los Angeles, and Spencer both have forecast victory without unbecoming modesty.

"Quarry is just a kid," says the 24-year-old Spencer, who started pro boxing five years earlier. "He's meeting me too soon. He's also done some 'mouthing' and I plan to chastise him a little."

In other pre-fight sallies, Quarry talked of cutting Spencer "in two," while the latter said he might let Jerry stick around as long as the fourth round.

Each fighter will receive $125,000 for this bout and the winner is guaranteed $250,000 — as is Ellis — in the championship fight.

TWO ENGLISH TENNIS STARS MAY TURN PRO

LONDON (AP) — George MacCall, Los Angeles Tennis promoter, moved a step nearer Friday to bringing top women players into his pro troupe.

He contacted Britain's two leading women stars, Mrs. Ann Jones and Virginia Wade, and got a favorable response.

"I had long talks with both of them," MacCall said. "I didn't make a firm offer but both indicated they were interested."

Last week MacCall made offers to Mrs. Billie Jean King of Long Beach, the reigning Wimbledon queen, and Mrs. Margaret Smith Court of Australia.

He also reportedly is interested in Brazil's Maria Bueno.

'Men Friday' Upset Aztecs

By JIM McCORMACK Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — Rumors spread rapidly here Friday night that Cal State Long Beach basketball coach Randy Sandefur is trying to reschedule his remaining CCAA games for Fridays.

The 49ers remained unbeaten in conference play on that night of the week by clipping defending champion San Diego State, 62-57.

"We were lucky," the unassuming Sandefur said after watching the 49ers regain a share of the CCAA lead, completing first-round competition with a 5-2 record, including a 4-0 mark on Friday.

Admittedly, the fact that San Diego shot 30 per cent from the field had something to do with the victory, but the credit for at least part of that should go to the 49er defense.

On offense the difference was Dick Nelson. The 49er forward was fantastic, making 12 of 18 floor shots on his way to a game-high 25 points. He also topped everyone in rebounds with 13.

An announcer on a San Diego radio station, interviewing Nelson after the game, commented that the 49er's performance was the best he had seen against the Aztecs this season.

Later, Nelson, who resembled a 225-pound welt, said "I can't say if this was my best game of the year, but it certainly was the most satisfying."

In this instance, Nelson was echoing the sentiments of his teammates. It was a game was made by the littlest man on the court. Long Beach's 5-foot-9 Rick Mancebo dropped in a 26-footer to give the 49ers a 55-53 lead.

Nelson then added the advantage with two muscle shots off passes from Stephens, who also scored off a great assist from Jim Greenfield and Long Beach led, 62-55, with 1:11 to go.

San Diego's efforts to rally were aborted by Nelson, who collected an important rebound and blocked a shot as the 49ers protected a five-point lead.

It was fortunate, too, because the 49ers were so excited about the possibility of beating San Diego that they missed three lead free throws in one-and-one situations in the final 29 seconds.

Sandefur was right. They were lucky... and good.

Boycott Outlasts Damascus

President Robert P. Strub declared the program cancelled for a second day because of an insufficiency of entries to present a nine-race card.

Horse owners did not enter either Thursday or Friday in a battle to gain higher purses from the track.

The horsemen were receiving 40 per cent of the purses. They sought 43 per cent over a three-year period — a one per cent increase each year. The track agreed to a 43 per cent increase, but the horsemen then hiked their demand to 47 per cent.

California tracks have paid horsemen 40 per cent of their pari-mutuel share the past 16 years. On Jan. 25, Santa Anita increased it to 41.

It was estimated that 1 per cent would be about $135,000 for the current meeting.

When negotiations reached a stalemate in mid-week, the horsemen met Wednesday night and decided not to enter their horses. This forced cancellation.

The dispute not only forced cancellation of what promised to be the biggest weekend attraction of the meeting, it also delayed the flow of about $360,000 in tax revenue into state coffers.

On an important racing Saturday, when the wagering reaches $4.5 million, California collects $360,000, or about seven per cent of the pari-mutuel handle, the same as the track receives.

Two similar boycotts have occurred during the past year at major tracks.

Aqueduct in New York was closed a week last April and Hialeah in Florida on its opening day this year, Jan. 17.

The New York Racing Assn., which operates all tracks, provided about $15,000 purse money daily for the remainder of the season to assure racing.

An agreement was reached in Florida under which the purse share was raised about 2 per cent to 45.

Vikings Rise to Occasion, Stun 'Gades

By DAVE DANIEL

Long Beach City College, showing more spirit in one game than it has all season, easily defeated Bakersfield College, 109-73, Saturday night before 2,123 fans.

The Vikings did little wrong and almost everything right in securing second place with L.A. Valley in the Metropolitan Conference and dropping Bakersfield into a tie for third.

Coach Chuck Kane saw the Vikings hit 63 per cent of their shots in moving thanks mostly to Zeller, who scored all 16 of his points in the opening half and added six assists.

Bakersfield coach Bill Nelson, in his first year, was obviously unhappy with his team from the beginning. When the starting five players scored only six points in the first six minutes, he yanked all five and replaced them with a group that didn't do much better.

In the freshman preliminary game, Harris' younger brother, Melvin scored 25 points as coach John Rambo's team dropped an 81-69 decision to UAW Local 148, a top-notch City League team.

their Metro record to 6-2 and avenging their first-round loss to the 'Gades in Bakersfield.

Six Vikings hit in double figures, as Shawn Johnson scored his average 23 points, but it was Tommie Lee Harris who won the hearts and applause of the fans.

Harris, who has waited two years to play for LBCC after redshirting last season and playing on the frosh the year before, scored 15 points—all in the second half on a seven-of-eight from the field effort and a free throw.

The output is a career high for the 6-2 forward. Prior to Friday night's game, he had taken only eight shots in the first five Metro games he played in this season.

Backing up Johnson and Harris were guards Gary Zeller and Sammy Washington with 16 and 10 points and forwards Rick Wilson and Jon Borchert with 15 and 10.

The Vikings scored the first four points of the night and never had to worry after that. Consistent shooting and good rebounding kept them on top throughout the first 20 minutes.

At halftime, the Vikings led by 20 points, 49-29.

Palmer hit up his pants and went to work Friday in the awe-inspiring manner which has made him the "idol of the fairways."

And when the day was over, Palmer had one of his famous charges rolling in high gear after hammering out a five-under-par 67 at Indian Wells to move into a tie with young Tom Wieskopf for the third-round lead in the Bob Hope Classic at 209, six under par.

It marks the first time this year that Palmer has been at the top of the pack... and he would have had the undisputed lead if his tee shot hadn't hit a marsh on the second hole and resulted in a bogey five.

Here Comes Arnie: Da Da Da Dat Da Daa, Charge!

By DAVE LEWIS Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS—Arnold Palmer hitched up his pants and went to work Friday in the awe-inspiring manner which has made him the "idol of the fairways."

And when the day was over, Palmer had one of his famous charges rolling in high gear after hammering out a five-under-par 67 at Indian Wells to move into a tie with young Tom Wieskopf for the third-round lead in the Bob Hope Classic at 209, six under par.

It marks the first time this year that Palmer has been at the top of the pack... and he would have had the undisputed lead if his tee shot hadn't hit a marsh on the second hole and resulted in a bogey five.

Arnie had a fantastic round which easily could have been a 62 or 63 if he had been able to get his putting stroke working a little more consistently. He missed three birdie putts "three to four" feet... and rimmed the cup three other times from distances of 12 to 15 feet.

"If Arnie continues to play like this, he'll win the tournament by four or five strokes," said one tour veteran who was able to catch part of the round.

Meanwhile, Weiskopf, who came out of the pack with a 68 a year ago on the third round to take over the 54-hole lead in the Desert Classic, had another 68 Friday at Indian Wells to gain a share of first place.

Last year, Weiskopf went into a tailspin on the final two rounds and slid all the way down to a tie for 48th and last money of $138 when he shot a pair of 77's.

However, the long-driving Ohioan who is labeled as one of the "can't miss" prospects among the young players, is confident of hanging on better this time "if I can just get over the par-three holes from here on out."

He now has had five bogeys in his three rounds... all on par-three holes. Two on Friday's round enabled Palmer to catch him.

Meanwhile, the top 16 players in the standings after 54 holes of the marathon event are within three strokes of each other.

Four are tied at 210, a stroke behind the two pacesetters — Gay Brewer, Bruce Devlin, Charles Coody and Bob McCallister.

Brewer had a 69 at Indian Wells; Devlin, the co-leader after two rounds, had an even par 72 over the same course, while McCallister had a 68 and Coody a 69 at Bermuda Dunes.

Six more are locked at 211, including Billy Casper and George Archer, who had 69's at Indian Wells; Canadian George Knudson with a 68 at Eldorado, and Lee Trevino with a 70 at La Quinta. Dick Lotz and Jimmy Powell are the other two in that bracket.

Casper, who started on the 10th tee, had closed in

West Goes Like Young Man, Lakers Smash Sonics, 151-113

By DOUG IVES

There are those who feel that Jerry West, at age 29, has peaked, that the all-pro guard is on a downhill ride that can never be reversed.

It is a fact that West has become injury-prone the last two seasons, but in every other phase of the game the all-pro guard is as great as he was four or five years ago.

Who says so? The statistics do. And so do Bill van Breda Kolff and Fred Schaus. What's more, West himself thinks he is playing as well now as he ever has.

The Seattle Sonics were the latest team to feel the sting of one of West's hot streaks Friday night as the Lakers breezed to a 151-113 victory before 12,021 fans in the Forum.

West netted only 20 points, five below his average, but he still was named the star of the game for a typical all-around West performance that included 11 assists, high percentage shooting (8-14), six steals and superb defense.

In the last 10 games, of which the Lakers have won eight, West has hit a torrid 60 per cent from the field to raise his season fieldgoal percentage to .489, which is second only to Oscar Robertson among NBA guards.

When you consider that this figure is the highest in his eight-year career, and that his broken nose isn't fully mended, you then must put stock in West's own appraisal that he is not going downhill.

"I don't like to boast," says Jerry, "but I honestly feel my game is as sharp now as it ever was. I know in the last three weeks I've played better than any time in the last two years."

Van Breda Kolff, in his rookie season, claims, "It's hard to conceive him playing any better. With his bad luck lately, he has every right to be slipping, but he hasn't."

Mr. V lauded Jerry's defense more than his offense, saying, "He has great defensive knowledge... of what the other team is going to do. He makes so many key steals it demoralizes the other club and gives us a big lift."

West's steals weren't pivotal against the Sonics, but two third-period baskets were, according to van Breda Kolff. Seattle trailed 72-54 at halftime, but six

ALCINDOR: 'HAVE TO BEAT USC'

Troy Promises 'Gimmicks' for Lew, UCLA Today

By LOEL SCHRADER

Lew Alcindor is seeing things differently these days — literally and figuratively. The eye abrasion and subsequent irritis which immobilized the UCLA center for two games and reduced his effectiveness in three more have "just about cleared up," according to Lew.

And Alcindor now looks upon today's game with USC as "the most important of the season."

Earlier in the year, Lew viewed his return to New York and a pair of games at Madison Square Garden as the high points of the season.

But events of the past two weeks have changed his thinking. First of all, the Bruins were beaten for the first time in 48 games, losing to Houston before more than 52,000 at the Astrodome. Secondly, USC has come on strong to match UCLA's 4-0 Pacific Eight record.

"We have to beat USC so we'll be certain to get another shot at Houston," says Alcindor.

The memory of the Astrodome is not pleasant and Alcindor declines to discuss it.

"People will only think I'm making excuses," he said Friday as the Bruins worked lightly for today's 2:30 encounter with the Trojans.

Channel 5, 2:30 p.m.

Trojans at Pauley Pavilion. The game will be televised live by Channel 5.

"The eye is nearly normal," said Lew. "It's perfect when I get up in the morning, but sometimes late in the day a fuzziness develops from strain."

Lew admits there's something special about a USC game.

"It's the Trojans' attitude more than anything," he said. "Last year when they stalled against us, their center, Ron Taylor, came out on the floor and said: 'How are you going to like losing?'"

"They came close but they didn't do it. And I don't think we're going to let them do it this time, either."

USC coach Bob Boyd has different ideas.

You can bet your dentures the Trojans will slow down the action, and you'll still be certain of enjoying a post-game steak.

USC came within a missed shot in the last two seconds of upsetting the Bruins last year with a stalling game. UCLA won in overtime, 40-35.

Boyd promises "gimmicks" on both offense and defense.

Ironically, the Trojans go into today's game with the longest winning streak of the two teams. They've won six in a row. The Bruins, who gained national notoriety while piling up 47 consecutive wins, have won their last two.

No one has beaten UCLA at Pauley since the place was opened in December of 1966. And it's highly improbable it will happen today.

ONLY HER CHROMOSOMES KNOW

Olympic Query: 'Is She or Isn't She?'

Combined News Services
GRENOBLE, France—Bunny Fields, a pet British Alpine skier, burst into loud laughter and said, "I think it's a ball, really. Personally, I can't wait to take the test."

"It's not funny for some," added Austria's striking Dikke Eger German in a somber note. "None of us would want to race against men."

The Alpine women skiers, among the most beautiful and feminine in the Winter Olympics, are both amused and chagrined by directives that they must be subjected to saliva tests to determine if they are really women.

"It seems a bit ridiculous, and a wasted effort in some ways," said Karen Budge of Jackson, Wyo., a slalom specialist.

It certainly is in Karen's case. She is a willowy blonde, 5-foot-8, with the figure of a Las Vegas showgirl.

Most of the girls here are happy that they look like girls and they're not mad at the Olympic Committee for perhaps doubting it.

The rumblings about Olympic sex started last summer when Poland's track star, Ewa Klobukowska, was disqualified from the European Cup track meet in Kiev on the basis of a chromosome count.

The tests were ordered by the medical commission of the International Olympic Committee at a meeting Jan. 26 in an effort to avoid masculine hermaphrodites from competing in female events.

Doctors Friday began testing the girls, going down a list and quietly selecting each fifth girl on the roster.

Officials who refused to be named said the system of random selection did nothing to solve the problem since it still left too many of the girls unchecked.

"They should test the most obvious or all of them," one official said, "but not go down the list and pick them out of the blue. This makes a mockery of what these tests are supposed to accomplish. It is ludicrous."

The announcement that the test would be made was widely reported to have triggered the Soviet Union to leave triple gold medal winner Claudia Boyarskikh behind.

Bulgarian champion, Krastana Stoewa, who last year tied for first place with Boyarskikh at the pre-Olympics at Autrans, also was left behind because of the tests.

Austria's reigning world downhill champion, Erika Schinegger, quit the national team this season "for personal reasons." It was widely reported that the reasons had to do with uncertainty about being able to pass a sex test.

The test which is being administered is a buccal test, which involves the scraping of the tissue on the inside of the mouth. The tissue is then analyzed to determine the number of chromosomes. Men and women have 22 identical chromosomes. If a 23 male chromosome is found in the test that person will be disqualified.

The British girls brought along certificates from their doctors attesting to their femininity. It won't be enough for the Olympic committee.

"We find it all terribly amusing," said Divina Galica, captain of the British team. "We aren't worried."

GB Boss Can't Psell Name

Combined News Services

GREEN BAY — The new coach of the Green Bay Packers is such a celebrity that people don't even know how to spell his name.

Some spell it Bengston; others take the easy way out and spell it Bengson. The right way is B-e-n-g-t-s-o-n.

Nobody has much trouble with the first name. It's Phil.

More often than not, Phil's name has been spelled B-e-n-g-s-t-o-n. Even the Packer press book, the football guide and perhaps National Football League records spell it wrong.

Bengston explains that the progenitor of his Swedish family was named Bengt, and his descendants called themselves Bengtson.

The 54-year-old Bengtson was named Thursday night as Vince Lombardi's hand-picked successor as head coach of the Packers.

While Lombardi will still be the No. 1 man in the front office, he made it clear Bengtson would be the No. 1 man on the football field.

"All quotes concerning the team from now on will come from Bengtson," Lombardi said. "All quotes concerning management will come from me."

Bengtson said he didn't expect any interference from Lombardi.

"Our relationship has been very close. I'm certain there will be no interference. I'm sure Vince will have his hands full with his job as general manager."

Lombardi, as general manager, acts as owner of the community-owned, non-profit Packers. He makes decisions, guided by a board of directors, an owner would make with any other team.

The new coach acknowledged that Lombardi's standards of discipline were no small factor in the capture of five championships in nine seasons.

"I fully understand those standards," he said, "and I fully intend to continue with that kind of a program."

U.S. Bobsledders Sparkle in Tuneup

Combined News Services

GRENOBLE, France — An American bobsled pilot, Navy Lieutenant Paul Lamey Friday braved a driving snow storm to post the top clocking in time trials on the Olympic run.

Lamey of Manchester, N.H., and his brakemen, Navy ADR 2 Robert Huscher, of Keeseville, N.Y., sped down the 1,500-meter ice chute in one minute 12.65 seconds to beat a field which included multi-world champion Eugenio Monti of Italy and Olympic champion Tony Nash of Britain.

Elsewhere, conditions were so good that the skiers wished this was racing day.

"It's great," said America's Billy Kidd.

"Very good," said Austria's Gerhard Nennig and "excellent" France's Jean Claude Killy commented.

On the ladies downhill track, the verdict was similar.

The start for both men and women is the same at the Croix de Champrosse but then the girls flash down to Le Recoil while the men's trail plunges over two steep walls to Casserousse.

It was at the second of these walls that the first tumbles occurred. Two Turks took the more spectacular falls, but were unhurt.

"Are you out of your minds?" their coach admonished them. "This is your first day on the downhill trail and you go down as if you want to break a record."

In other training, a tangle of Finnish and Russian cross-country skiers led to a mixup. Twelve Finns taking part in a 20-kilometer proving race ran across the tracks of the Russians who were undergoing a similar test.

The result was a disaster. Most of the Finns took off on the Soviet tracks and only four of them finished the race they were in. The rest got lost and finally turned up back at the Olympic Village hours later.

LENDING A HAND

Lidia Soblikova of the Soviet Union gets support from French soldier as she removes blade covers from her skates, prior to workout at Olympic ice rink in Grenoble, France. Lidia won four gold medals for speed skating in the 1964 Winter Olympic Games, and is primed for 1968 events starting Tuesday.

Porsches Threat at Daytona?

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Fords own the pole positions, but the favorite's role rests with four new Porsches today in the grueling 24 hours of Daytona Auto Race.

One of the 2.2 liter Porsche 907s—first over two-liter cars ever built by the famous Stuttgart factory — is expected to be front Sunday at 3 p.m. when the race ends.

A Ford GT40, driven by Jackie Ickx of Belgium and Brian Redman of England, set a qualifying record of 179.37 miles per hour Friday to take the inside front position for the starting flag. Right behind at 117.2 mph was another GT40 piloted by Paul Hawkins and David Hobbs.

But almost leisurely, the ghost-white Porsches took the 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th starting positions with speeds ranging from 116.92 to 114.14 mph.

BASEBALL CLINIC TODAY AT 3 PARKS

A baseball clinic, sponsored by the Long Beach Recreation Department, will be held this morning at three city parks, El Dorado, Heartwell and Houghton. The school will be open to boys between eight and 12 years of age.

Eight and nine-year-olds will work out from 9 until 10:30 a.m. Boys 10 through 12 will take over the diamonds from 11 until 12:30. There is no pre-registration.

Instructors include Harry Minor, Braves; Rocky Bridges, Angels, and John McConnell, Cal State Long Beach.

Davenport Duels McCullough in S.D. Tonight

SAN DIEGO — Many of the nation's top track and field athletes will assault record books tonight in the second San Diego Indoor Games.

Biggest duel before an expected crowd of 10,000 at the Sports Arena will be staged by Willie Davenport and Earl McCullough in the 660-yard high hurdles. Davenport was rated the world's No. 1 hurdler in 1967.

Hialeah Trainer Wins Three Races in a Row

Combined News Services

Veteran trainer Jack Skirvin made history at Hialeah Park Friday when he saddled three consecutive winners.

It was established that no trainer ever before had won three in a row at Hialeah.

Dr. James G. Catlett, who had been a steward at the track since 1932, could not recall any trainer ever winning three races in one day, much less three in a row. Hialeah opened in 1925.

Skirvin sent out Darien Fats, $4.20, to win the third race; won the fourth with Water Boy, $11.40, and then took the fifth with Best In Show, $40.20.

Skirvin used a different rider on each horse — Angel Cordero Jr., Bob Ussery and Helidoro Gustines, in that order.

In Reality, which has been out of the money only once in 20 races, headed a field of 13 named Friday for the 33rd running of the Seminole Handicap at Hialeah Park today.

The son of Intentionally, winner of the 1962 Seminole, will carry high weight of 121 pounds in the final major tune-up for the $100,000 Widener Handicap here Feb. 17. In Reality, owned by Mrs. Frances M. Genter, was listed at 2-1 in pre-race figuring and will be ridden by Farlie Fires.

Ronnie Baldwin booted longshot Sir Gaelic across the finish line a length in front of Prince Reaper in the feature at the New Orleans Fair Grounds.

Sir Gaelic raced the six furlongs in 1:13 flat and paid $31.80, $16 and $11.

Silly Squaw, ridden by Tony Garamone, won the feature eighth race Friday at Pimlico. The victor ran the six furlongs in 1:13 4-5 and paid $31, $12.60 and $6.

Cook's 6.89 Charge Tops Qualifying

Don Cook shattered the six-second barrier Friday to lead qualifying for the Top Fuel Eliminator at the NHRA Winter Nationals on the Pomona Fairgrounds.

The San Diego driver turned the quarter mile in 6.89 seconds to nose out Bakersfield's James Warren, who clocked 7.04 and 227 miles per hour. Long Beach's Tom McEwen was third qualifier at 7.12, and American Hot Rod Assn. king Don Prudhomme followed at 7.19.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS: To Love, Honor...and Cheer

NEW YORK (UPI) — At least one U.S. Olympian will be cheering like mad for one Norwegian — and vice versa — in the Winter Olympic starting next week at Grenoble, France.

Larry Damon, four-time member of the U.S. cross-country ski team, is married to Norwegian gal skier Babbie Enger... He's from Burlington, Vt., but they now live in Norway where you ski cross country or you don't get where you want to go.

Frank Potts, 41 years head track coach at the University of Colorado, will referee the university division at the Kansas Relays April 18-20... Frank, who retires at the end of the season, is a former NCAA pole vault champ... He did all of 12 feet, four inches to win the 1925 title... today, Bob Seagren of USC doesn't even start until the bar goes to 16 feet.

Local outlet that handles New York Yankee baseball television says all 10 American League cities, including newcomer Oakland, have color equipment available for baseball telecasts... That's one department the AL leads the National, anyway.

Rankin Smith, owner of pro football's Atlanta Falcons, has been elected chairman of Georgia's State Game and Fish Commission... Maybe he can find a way to give his Falcons more protection when invading NFL gunners come to town.

was a childhood polio victim... His right leg is an inch shorter than his left... But he's a fine skater, skier and golfer... Phil hails from Erie, Pa.

Penn State opens spring football practice April 13... Wonder how long it will take for coach Joe Paterno to put in a new play for a fourth-and-one situation on his own 15?... Florida State ruined the one he had.

to share the place with thoroughbreds starting this summer... On different dates, of course... Big part of the $1.5 million construction job included floodlighting both the track and parking areas.

Most basketballers prefer their home floor but Jerry Lucas of the Cincinnati Royals insists he likes Madison Square Garden's baskets best of all... He doesn't know why but he finds 'em easier to hit than any other... The New York Knicks could use his secret.
